a dynamic and constructive thinker, a far-sighted and courageous leader, a true Twentieth Century University president, worthy of his calling, this volume of The Calyx
is dedicated.

Henry Louis Smith

PRESIDENT HENRY LOUIS SMITH belongs to that long line of distinguished men who were born in the manse; for he is the son of a well known former pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Greensboro, North Carolina. Growing up amid the trying times in the South immediately following the Civil War he learned many hard lessons in life from experience. As a consequence of the sacrifices of his father and mother, who knew the value of an education, and of his own ambition he obtained a college education at a time when many other boys in the South were denied such a privilege. He was graduated from Davidson College in 1881, and in 1886 he received an A. M. from the same institution. In 1890 he took the Ph.D. degree at the University of Virginia.

As a teacher of science at Davidson where Dr. Smith began his professional career, he was so full of enthusiasm and inspiration that the students flocked into his classes. But his restless energy could not well be confined within the walls of a class room, and after twelve years of service in the professor's chair, he was elected to the presidency of Davidson.

The policy of Dr. Smith since his election to the presidency of Washington and Lee in 1912 has been to develop the students in the best manner possible physically, intellectually and morally. He has constantly directed his efforts toward restricting the number of students and increasing the number of members of the faculty in order that the proportion might become more satisfactory for the best results in teaching. Possessing a mind of scientific and practical bent, he is yet an idealist with a vivid imagination. He is a man without prejudices who deals with abstract principles rather than with individuals.

From boyhood Dr. Smith has been an athlete and lover of outdoor sports. Hunting, fishing, boating, swimming and skating have always been his delight, and in one or another of these forms of sport he still takes his recreation. For an avocation he has adopted farming, and nothing gives him more genuine pleasure than to slip away from the busy duties of his office and spend a few days studying the problems of his apple orchard in North Carolina.

Dr. Smith is a fluent and effective public speaker. With his remarkable powers of analysis he carries conviction by his appeal to the reason and the intellect. And he is in constant demand as a speaker wherever educational, economic, or religious questions are to be discussed.

The one word which probably bulks largest in President Smith's success as a teacher, administrator, athlete, farmer, and speaker is enthusiasm. For whatever he does, he does with all his might.

The Colonnade

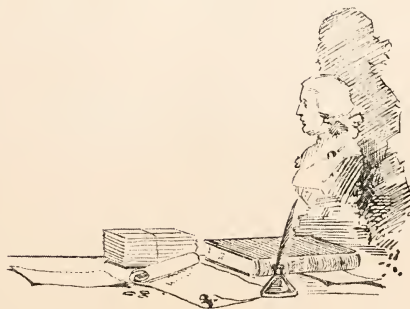

Sun-kissed walls of learning,
A grandeur more enduring
Than the ancient domes of emperor's palaces.

The Carnegie Library

"A good book is the best of friends, the same today and forever."

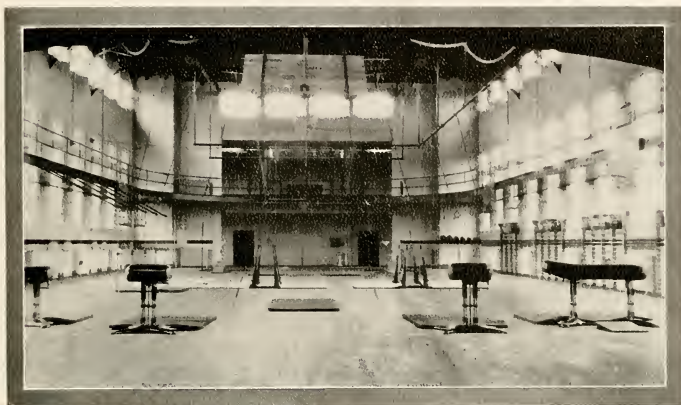

The University Commons

“There are so few that resist the allurements and luxuries of the table, that the usual civilities at a meal are very like being politely assisted to the grave.”

Interior of the Doremus Gymnasium

"Health is the vital principle of bliss; and exercise, of health."

By Newcomb Hall

In this building beats the heart of an ever-widening Washington and Lee.

The Campus in the Late Spring

"Sweet daughter of a rough and stormy sire, hoar winter's blooming child, delightful spring."

Across the Campus

"Bowered in beauty, built on duty,
Washington and Lee, all hail!"

Lee's Dormitory

"One hour's sleep before midnight is worth two after."

In Old Virginia

"Where the gods walk on the hilltops
In the Sunset's rosy hue."

The Blanket of White

“Winter’s widespread blanket
Holds the promise of a glory that will fill a future day,
That will set the world a-singing,
Fill the world with warbled ringing,
When the flowers spread their petals in the balmy days of May.”

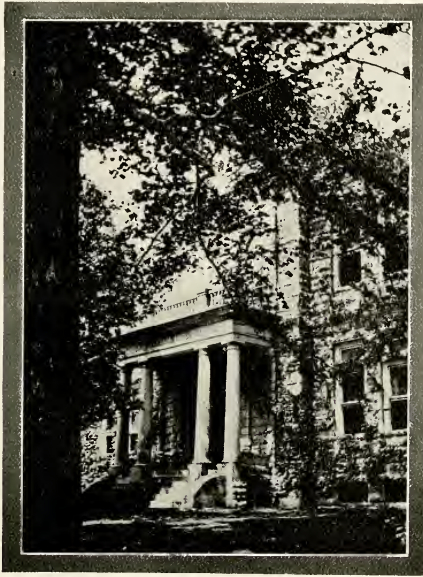

Snow on the Old Campus

“Come see the North wind’s masonry
Out of an unseen quarry evermore,
Furnished with tile, the fierce artificer
Curves his white bastions with projected roof
Round every windward stake or door or tree.”

In the Days of Snow and Storm

“Under the snowdrifts the blossoms are sleeping,
Dreaming their dreams of the sunshine, in June;
Down in the hush of their quiet they’re keeping Trills from the thrush’s summer-sung tune.”

The Law Building

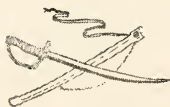

“There is no man so good who, were he to submit all his thoughts and actions to the laws, would not deserve hanging ten times in his life.”

And Finally--A Campus View

"In the shadow of the mountains—

THE foreword is that branch of a publication to which the public always look for originality—and are always disappointed. Realizing that there is nothing new under the sun, we are not going to attempt the impossible feat of presenting for your consideration anything startlingly original in this prologue. The ideal of the dramatist is to present a play, not himself. And so, we shall content ourselves with merely drawing aside the curtains of our stage and presenting THE CALYX 1917 to your gaze with as little reference as possible to those who have labored through many long hours in its production.

In spite of Dr. Pollard's untiring efforts for co-operation on our campus, it has always been a lamentable fact that most of the labors of publication fall on the shoulders of the Editor-in-Chief. This year, we have been fortunate in having a CALYX staff, which has at all times worked faithfully with its editor. For this, that weary ink-spiller is duly grateful. We would pay tribute also to our little dynamo, called the Business manager, who has never failed to turn over a needed scheckle. Not content with finding an abundance of work for every member of the Staff, we have also called upon others. In this connection, we wish to thank Mrs. E. F. Shannon, Miss Pauline Fisher, and Messrs. L. A. McMurray, L. T. Brown and J. B. Mallard for their artistic work, and Messrs. E. A. Donahue, J. R. Caskie, and Drs. H. L. Smith and E. F. Shannon for their excellent contributions. Our historians have also done good service. In general, we wish to thank our advertisers for our financial salvation, and the student body for its important assistance in the taking of pictures, rendering information and subscribing to the publication.

Finally, we hope that we have with some small degree of success presented the manifold interests and the spirit of this eventful year on the campus of Washington and Lee. It has been no child's task for us, but we are now happy in the knowledge of work faithfully and lovingly performed for our school. We have not the slightest doubt that our readers will "mingle blame with praise," and so in closing we would remind you of that old contention of the pessimist,

"Blessed are they that expect but little,
For verily, they shall not be disappointed."

ALUMNI REUNION OF FINALS 1916

The New Movement Among the Alumni

FOR generations Washington and Lee has had an alumni association with more or less active chapters in many cities throughout the South. It has long been the custom to place at the disposal of these organized chapters fifty-dollar one-year scholarships to be awarded by each chapter to some especially promising new student.

Eight or nine years ago, recognizing the vagueness and inefficiency of this general organization, The University Alumni, Incorporated, was established and chartered by a group of leading alumni. The purpose of this organization was to establish a regular alumni endowment fund, this fund to be held and administered by a body of trustees elected by The University Alumni, Incorporated, and its income devoted to such uses as the trustees of the Alumni, Incorporated, approved and adopted. The annual dues were made five dollars for each member, this being modified in a few years by a by-law allowing the more recent alumni to pay an annual fee of only one dollar during the first five years after leaving the University.

It was also the hope of this organization to publish, preferably at Washington City where its officers resided, a regular Washington and Lee magazine to represent the University before the general public.

The officers of this organization, at the beginning of the new administration in 1912, were Senator George E. Chamberlain, President, Dr. William Taylor Thom, Secretary, and Richard W. Hynson, Treasurer, all of Washington City.

By the commencement at the close of 1914-15 the alumni fund thus collected had slowly grown to something over $3,000, special gifts amounting to $600 or $700 had been made from its funds to the University, and the interest among the alumni was steadily though slowly growing.

During this year the efforts of Dr. Thom and his associates were vigorously reinforced by the new president, a group of the younger alumni, and especially by the efforts of Dr. Calhoun, of William and Mary, to bring together all the alumni who had studied under General Lee to the campus at commencement in June, 1916. This commencement marked the beginning of a new era in the interest and loyalty of the alumni. More than 250 were present at the reunion, breaking all records and generating a new and deeper enthusiasm.

reared safe from harm the bulwark and Palladium of our liberties, the United States Constitution. Forget not, also, Justice Shiras, who changed his opinion overnight, and Justice Harlan, who would write a strong dissenting opinion. "I have been proceeding with great pains, for I want the class to get this point," but space forbids that I discuss the welfare clause of the Constitution. In Corporations we have seen wonderful acrobatic "feats" in balancing, while the blackboard has borne voiceless reproach to oily locks.

In our memories will linger "Joe's" pathetic spendthrift case reduced to moving pictures, "such a little one," and "That's bad. Not so bad." In days to come we will visualize "Boss," with open vest, telling us to "get this point copped down," or lambasting the old common law judges who could not see that which was plain to everyone else. Profit much we will from his lucid explanations of the law; and assisted by Hornbook law (from which some of us may recoil with horror), we will prepare "bang-up" cases. As "jury-charmers" we will cut up our opponents' arguments "root and branch," and then fix "a soft spot for the jury to light on." It hath been said that much coin of the realm can be sequestered by prevailing over one's adversary.

Far be it from us to undervalue this law school with its conscientious, capable professors, and admirable teaching system; yet an acquaintanceship of nearly two years emboldens us to make a suggestion concerning this system. Today a man rises or falls as the grade on his examination paper is 80 to 100, or is below 80. On the examination depends everything. Not here lies the objection. It lies deeper. Since a man is held accountable only on his examination paper, opportunity is strongly presented to him to ease along in his studying until examinations be almost upon him; then by a feverish cramming he gets a somewhat insecure grasp of the subject such as will enable him to pass the ticket. Results: imperfectly prepared assignments, an attitude of how little rather than how much work is to be done in order to pass, and at the close of the term a hasty, superficial review followed by an even hastier forgetting.

Interest must be powerful to overcome inertia where difficult, complex reading of law is concerned. Will-power must be great to force a man to work steadily and painstakingly while practice with its many opportunities for study is one or two years distant. We hold that it requires a combination of accountability and pressure (analogous to the pressure of necessity in the business world) to make the average law student do full justice to himself in the matter of study.

We, therefore, suggest that there be weekly or ten-day written quizzes, and that these quizzes count and count heavily toward the passing grade. These quizzes in student assistants' hands would not lessen the professors' effectiveness. Here we have the combination of accountability and pressure, so desirable. Instead of only one necessarily hasty review, there would be many short reviews preparatory to these quizzes, thereby building up a sure foundation for the subject studied. The last review before examination would then drive home and clinch the main points and essentials of the ticket. Many men learn most by review. Why not have a number of compulsory opportunities for a man to infuse in himself the fundamentals of the law?

To Washington and Lee we will return in years to come, for these student days will then be our "good old days." In reunions we will kindle the brighter our love for this noble old school and will recall with joyful memory our "Golden Days" in our "Golden Youth" at Washington and Lee. Then we will say, "It is indeed good to be here, here at Washington and Lee."

ROBERT PATTERSON ADAMS

Trenton, Tennessee

From Trenton on the Forkeddeer River, Bob, as "a promising young man, who should go on to graduation," entered Washington and Lee under the hypnotic Dictatorship of the imperturbable, melliferous "Mike" Denny. Following that sage advice, he took his A.B. degree in 1915, and thought he would try all over again in the law school.

On May first last year Bob was forced to go home on account of his father's illness, thus losing the entire term's work. This spring, in consequence, he is taking every ticket taught in the law school. But have no fear; he will win out in spite of these odds.

Excepting his enforced absence a year ago, he has been present at every lecture since he has been in the law school, always occupying a front seat. Can any other Senior show such a record?

He will probably practice in St. Louis or in the Southwest.

BALDWIN BUCKNER BANE

Φ Κ Σ; Φ Δ Φ; Ο Δ Κ

Stanardville, Virginia

Here before you is a man with a fine mind, a strong will, and a forceful personality, backed by common sense and tact. Thus endowed, "Baldy" has won an enviable position of leadership in the law school, both within and without the classroom. He was president of the Junior Law Class, and has this year taken a very prominent part in class affairs.

Bane took his A.B. at Randolph-Macon College, and then spent four years at Randolph-Macon Academy (Bedford City, Va.) as teacher and football coach. With this as additional training he came to Washington and Lee to work, and work he has done. Contracts 97-95; Real Property 92-96; Pleading 98-94; 96, 96, 97, 97, 98, 99, 99, and 99. He is, however, no machine, as his ability to tell a story well amply illustrates.

He will probably practice in the Southwest.

WILLIAM VANSTAVERN BIRCHFIELD

Π Κ Α; Φ Α Δ

Marion, Virginia

In spite of his classical name "Birch" hails from Southwest Virginia, to-wit: Marion, in which little town he was born August 24, 1895. After sojourning at Randolph-Macon Academy, he went to Emory and Henry now and then for two years.

In 1914 he appeared on the local horizon and committed himself to the tender mercies of Clovis Moomaw, who was then standing during his lectures, his right fist driving the legal points home with resounding whacks. While dwelling in Lexington, Birchfield has been a frequent sufferer from pink eye, and this malady has prevented him on several occasions from taking his examinations.

Once having lived in the "Garden Spot of Virginia," a man must return; he cannot do otherwise. Birch, therefore, will practice in his home town. From present indications, Friend Cupid is possibly getting ready to shoot shortly.

JOHN RHODES BRAND

West Point, Mississippi

A graduate of West Point (H. S.), John, alias "Red," Brand took academic work at Tulane, stayed out of school a year, and forthwith and immediately deserted the "Father of Waters" for Washington and Lee. John's sentiments on a certain Mississippi senator are not fit for publication. All he will say is: "I wish I could have been down in Mississippi to help send Vardaman that iron cross."

"Red" is very popular with his classmates, and he now holds the office of Secretary-Treasurer. There is something of the Lincolnesque about him, both in his general build and in his keen intellect, calm deliberate manner, pensive tranquility of spirit, philosophical cast of mind, and sympathetic humanitarian outlook upon life. If there be in fact a genius in the class, John is that genius. Look at these grades: 94-92; 92, 94, 94, 94, 94, 94, 96, 98.

NYE BRITTS

North Tazewell, Virginia

Many Seniors owe debts of gratitude to Nye Britts, for he is the author of Britts' Notes on Corporations, which helped so much in a time of need last December. Being a stenographer of much capability, he has rendered valuable service to the class.

"Pete" was educated at the Tazewell High School and at Tazewell College. For five years after leaving school he worked in a law office as a stenographer. From 1910 to 1914 he was clerk to the United States Attorney for the Western District of Virginia. Deciding to devote his full time to the study of law, he came to Washington and Lee in 1915; and has been doing steady, consistent work ever since matriculating here. Contracts 91-92; Torts 91; Criminal Procedure 95; Criminal Law 96.

Nye is somewhat rotund, and we hope that wearing law practice will not reduce his embonpoint and geniality.

HARRY VAN METRE CAMPBELL

K A; Φ Δ Φ

Berkeley Springs, West Virginia

Harry was born in Salem, Virginia, October 12, 1896, but in boyhood he moved to Berkeley Springs, a spot which he still calls home. In 1911 he went to Augusta Military Academy and graduated in three years as lieutenant. After working a year he decided to study law: that he has well applied himself is proved by 95-91 on Pleading and by these other grades: 90, 91, 92, 95, 97, 97.

From constant exposure to cases Harry has acquired a judicial bearing and a deliberateness of manner befitting a supreme court judge. Possibly the judgeship will come his way in Ohio, for he has a desire to practice corporation law in the little hamlet of Youngstown. It will probably be a one-man firm, at least in the beginning.

While at school Harry has lived by the well-known formula: "Work hard and play hard and don't take life or anything else too seriously."

CLARENCE WILLIAM CARTER

II K A

Warrenton, Virginia

When it comes to dogged determination, we have to take off our hats to "Nick" Carter, whose likeness here greets you. With no other training than that afforded by a high school, he came to us from Warrenton in 1915, planning to take a three year course. After the first term had rolled around and away, he experienced a change of heart, and to show how complete the change was he made the highest mark in the class on second term Contracts. Though having both Pleading and Real Property this year, he made 95 on second term Pleading, again the highest mark in the class. We must also remember that he entered the law school before his nineteenth birthday, and will, consequently, get his degree while still a minor.

He desires to specialize in Real Property practice.

LAFAYETTE BEVINS CHAFIN

A X P

Williamson, West Virginia

Out of the hills of West Virginia, near the eastern mountains of Kentucky, from the heart of the million-dollar coal field, videlicet, Williamson, emerged Lafayette Bevins Chafin; and discarding for the time being his trusted howitzer, he entered our Academic School. After two years academic questions ceased to interest him and his better judgment whispered, "Tucker Hall." He came over and has been with us ever since.

"Chafe" was Valedictorian of his class at Williamson, and fluent speech has not become a lost art with him. He'll show those West Virginia folks a thing or two when he returns to practice in all the courts of Mingo and adjoining counties. He will go in with a prominent firm and devote himself largely to corporation practice.

He is recipient and sender of a four-cent letter every day. Watch the step!!!

GEORGE NORMAN DANIELSON
Appleton, Wisconsin

Danielson represents the Great Northwest in the law school this year. At Appleton he was Deputy Clerk of Courts 1909-1913, and also Deputy Sheriff 1910-1914. Passing his state bar in 1916, he was Acting District Attorney for Outagamie County last August, and he intends to run for the office in 1918.

He is staunchly Democratic, right to the core, his ambition being to make Outagamie Democratic, although he admits it's a right tough job. The county is overwhelmingly Republican, but a Democrat occasionally slips in office. Here's luck!!!

A intense, loyal admirer of Bryan and an assiduous devourer of the Commoner, indicate that he is a man of broad sympathies and democratic ideas. Danielson is of that trustworthy, dependable type in whom the voter can put his trust.

He says: "A successful lawyer should live like a hermit and work like a horse."

FREDERICK MICAHAH DAVIS
Φ Δ Θ; Φ Δ Φ; M C
Lynchburg, Virginia

Fred received his B.A. here in 1914, and stayed out of school a year before taking law. In 1914-1915 he was Deputy Clerk of the Lynchburg Corporation Court. Historian of the Junior Law and Senior Law classes. News Editor, Ring-tum Phi, '15-'16. Mandolin and Glee Clubs, '15-'16-'17. Vice-President 107th. President 108th. Annual Celebration of Graham-Lee Society. President of Literary Societies' Joint Celebration at Finals, 1917. President Masonic Club, '16-'17. English Instructor, '16-'17. Grades: 91, 91; 2nd term Pleading, 91; 92, 92, 92, 93, 94, 94, 95, 97.

He intends to follow law in Lynchburg, and may go in with a firm there, for a while at least.

Fred is an ardent lover of music, he and his guitar being inseparable companions. Besides his interest in harmonies, he apparently relishes dry bread which he at times in class abstracts from his pocket and eats with gusto.

He takes a rather serious view of life.

GABRIEL RAFAEL DE LA HABA

Φ K Σ; Φ A Δ

Santurce, Porto Rico

This Senior with the heavenly, artistic name is from a suburb of San Juan, Porto Rico's capital and principal seaport. Haba is, however, a Spanish citizen, his parents being Spanish, and his father being the founder and president of the Spanish Club Casa Espana. "De la" himself went to school at St. Francis Xavier in Barcelona, Spain, for several years.

Having taken some academic work at the University of Porto Rico, he came to this country, and finally came to this school. He intends to follow law for a time at least.

He was coxswain of the Albert-Sidney second crew in 1915, and of the first crew in 1916. Both years he guided the boatmen to victory.

Haba is a typical Latin in his quickness of manner and in his urbane suavity.

BURT LINCOLN DICKINSON

Φ K Σ; Φ A Δ

Marion, Virginia

This ruddy yet circumspect youth has already passed the State Bar Examination and has to show for it a pretty certificate (of which he is very proud). In bygone days he went to Richmond College, thinking he would there get an education. In due time, however, he came to, and came on to Lexington.

This big fellow is a quiet, steady worker, and so retentive is his memory that we do not hesitate to call him a depository of the law. He is one of the star men in the class, his grades alone being abundant proof: 91-90, 92, 93, 94, 95, 95-91, 96, 96, 98, and 98.

Dick intends to practice in Southwest Virginia.

In affairs matrimonial he states the following: "I am in a position of being very desirable and desirable, yet without any immediate hopes." Don't crowd so, girls. Give him air.

HAROLD FRANCIS DORGEVAL

Φ Κ Ψ

Summit, New Jersey

"Dorgy" is another man who decided to increase his work and get his degree in two years. That he will get it is a 100 per centum safe bet. Born in New York City, he wandered from place to place in his childhood and finally reached Summit, New Jersey, where he now has his home. Without prejudice.

Last year he was captain of the class basket ball team (beaten by the Senior Lawyers only), and has also been on the varsity basket ball and baseball squads. This year he is president of the second year law class. In making high grades our hero shows up very luminously: 94, 94, 94, 95, 95-90, 96, 96, and 97.

Dorgeval is of French descent and consequently he is full of life and vigor. Moreover, he is very friendly and affable; an irradiant smile comes at the slightest provocation.

Probably he'll practice in New York.

S. EMORY DURRANCE

Arcadia, Florida

"Daddy" Durrance is the dean of the law class. It was years after he had been in business before he decided to follow the legal profession. Then he chose the right law school. Laying aside all commercial affairs, he is putting all of his energy into the study of law.

Durrance was born in Florida, within the town of Arcadia, on Peace River. He is of pure Southern stock and of French descent. In these sylvan surroundings he entered into the commercial world, being in the orange and cattle business for a number of years.

He has here been a faithful and steady worker, and we wish for him the best of success in his legal conflicts of the future. He plans to practice with a Jacksonville firm. Those Florida Crackers are going to sit up and take notice.

DAVID ARCHER FALK

Z B T; Δ Σ P

Tampa, Florida

Following a year at U. of Pa., "Dave" entered in 1913 and during his four years' stay is getting two degrees from Washington and Lee. In earning his A.B. degree last year, he took four academic tickets. Consequently, he has had to take almost the entire law course this year.

He will probably practice business and commercial law in Tampa. What he wishes to be is a court room lawyer, for to him there is a subtle fascination in addressing a jury. In fact, anything that has speechmaking in it interests him hugely. You can gather this from his college honors: Secretary, Debating Council; Southern Collegian Staff; Varsity Debating Team, '15, '16, and '17. He was alternate in 1914. Grades: 91, 91, 93, 93.

"Dave" will have just passed twenty-one when he graduates.

GEORGE MARION GILLESPIE

Δ K E; Φ Δ Φ

Springfield, Illinois

George was born and reared in Illinois' capital. As president of his high school class he delivered a commencement address on "Thrift in Business" and then hied himself to the University of Chicago for further knowledge. Following two years in the academic department, he went for law to Illinois Wesleyan University, a three-year school. After a couple of years here an almost complete change in the teaching force brought about by the Grim Reaper caused him to seek a law school of equal rank and prestige. He, accordingly, matriculated here last fall.

George, though stalwartly Republican, is behind President Wilson, even if he suffered some pecuniary loss by Woodrow's re-election. In the stirring days during the campaign George was secretary-treasurer of the College Republican Club.

He will practice with his father in Springfield, engaging in railroad corporation law.

LORENZA JOHN HAMMACK

Δ Θ Φ

Gasburg, Virginia

You would never guess from knowing "Ham-mack" that he comes from such an inauspiciously named town as Gasburg. Leaving Brunswick, his native county, he travelled to the noble city of Lynchburg, for three years at Virginia Christian College. Then he taught at Barley, Virginia, among the cornfields and peanut patches. In passing, Barley is between Emporia and Roanoke Rapids. In September, 1915, he backed into Lexington and at Castle Hill came under the guardianship of "Strut" Sanford the First (and possibly Last).

With a chronic case of cheerfulness, a constancy of flow in case reciting, an upward tilt of the chin, and a quick mind, Hammack has been among us, storing away the law.

He says he has a quasi-chance of getting married in about three years. Possibly this underlies his plan of being a North Carolina barrister. Grades: 94, 96, 96, 97.

JOHN SEYBERT HANSEL
M C

McDowell, Virginia

Hansel's home is in Highland County, forty miles northwest from Lexington. He entered in 1911, along with Bob Adams, Glenn Edwards, Fred Davis, Bob Hobson, Side McCord, and Beef Sutherland. During his stay of one year he made the gym squad, using the old gym behind Tucker Hall. In 1914 he returned for a year of law, teaching the following year at Mt. Top School in Possum Hollow. Last September he came back for his degree. Evidently his muscles have not lost their cunning, for in the Heavy Gym Meet, March 8, he won the medal for skill on the parallel bars.

At the December bar examination he passed off three blocks; only one remains unconquered. He expects to practice in Virginia at some place west of the Blue Ridge.

Hansel is a fine fellow, unobtrusive, sociable, and industrious. He is a member of the Masonic Club.

WILLIAM EARL HENSON

Δ Θ Φ

Roanoke, Virginia

We knew the letters to Bill came frequently, but most of us did not realize the whole truth. After wearing out the post-office floor for about a year and a half, and walking around preoccupiedly, he was able to wait no longer, fell out with Old Father Time, and got married during the past Christmas holidays in Roanoke to the prettiest girl in that city. Thus ended a courtship extending over two years; thus is our class afforded an excellent example.

Prepared at Augusta Military Academy, Bill started into law without intervening college training. In the early part of 1916 he was forced to leave school on account of sickness, later spending seven weeks in a hospital. Grades: 91, 91, 91, 95.

Henson will join forces in Roanoke with the firm of Jackson and Henson (his father) as junior partner, carrying papers to the courthouse and going across to other offices to borrow books.

ROBERT PUSEY HOBSON

Π Κ Α

Frankfort, Kentucky

The Hobson boys evidently like Washington and Lee quite a bit. Bob entered in 1911, and was then known as "little Hobson," as he had two older brothers here. Now, six years later, we have another little Hobson here. Bob was president of his sophomore class, and in his senior year vice-president of the student body. The year 1914-1915 he spent with the L. and N. Engineering Department, engaged in field work.

In addition to his law work, Hobson is Instructor for Engineering I, II, and III, and he has full charge of the field work.

He naturally takes to law, as his father is a retired Chief Justice of Kentucky's Supreme Court. Real Property, 91-91; Contracts, 95-95; 2nd term Pleading, 94; 90, 91, 92, 93, 93, 94, 97. Last summer he passed the Kentucky examination, and is thinking of practicing somewhere in that state.

JOSEPH LANE HOWARD

A X P; Δ Θ Φ

Floyd, Virginia

In the confines of Floyd County, 3200 feet above sea-level, right on top of the Blue Ridge, within a stone's throw of the county court house, was born easy-going Joe Lane Howard, the subject of this sketch.

He took three years of prep. work at Fork Union Military Academy; then tried electrical engineering at Ga. Tech. for a while. He says that he doesn't like engineering and quit Tech. on that account. It is, however, reported to us that Tech. was too large for him, so large that he got lost down there.

In January, 1915, he entered the law school and joined forces with us the following session. Joe says: "I haven't the slightest idea in the world where I will practice." He is likely to go into politics and get himself elected as reform mayor of some city.

ROBERT ARTHUR JETT, JR.

Σ Φ Ε; Μ C

Avalon, Virginia

Born and reared on a farm in Northumberland County, near the mouth of the Potomac, Bob left the old homeplace for Baltimore and the University of Maryland. Such hard licks did he put in at that institution that he was presented with an LL.B. degree in 1913. He worked in the financial department of the "Baltimore Sun" for two years; then associated himself with the Commercial Credit Company, commercial bankers of Baltimore, and travelled the South and Southwest from Maryland to Texas. Last fall he entered here in order to familiarize himself with Virginia law preparatory to taking the state bar.

He intends to practice in the eastern part of Virginia and will go in with a firm. His experience in the business world has made him a wide-awake, energetic man such as will take a proposition and push it through.

Bob is a member of the Masonic Club.

ROBERT RHEA KANE

Φ Γ Δ

Gate City, Virginia

In the highlands of smiling Scott, Southwest Virginia, is found the birthplace of Bob Kane. As graduate of King College (where he was King Bee) he went into Washington County and taught school at Craig's Mill on Smith Creek. Rustic life proving distasteful, he returned to teach a year at his Alma Mater. Possessing an attractive personality and a smooth tongue, he started selling real estate, and the task of searching titles confronted him. He resolved, therefore, to drink from Tucker Hall's Fountain of Legal Knowledge.

As a medium of approach to influential clients, Bob has taken up golf. Sometimes he actually makes the round in sixty.

"I am going back to the hills of my native country (far from level, my friend) and change it from rank Republican to dependable Democrat. I am anxious to enter politics for the advancement of the Democratic Party."

ALFRED TRACY LOYD

Ranoke, Virginia

Tracy was born in Atlanta in November, 1894, but his message has been located in Roanoke since 1902. Even while going to high school, he studied in a law office, and though a 1915 high school graduate, he entered the law school not wholly untrained in legal thinking.

As he is taking the two-year course, he must put his time in constant study, morning, noon and night. Yet he does not let this interfere with the real sport of sports—handball. He might as well admit that he is a devotee of that game; in fact, he is called "the handball shark."

His shingle will probably hang in Roanoke. He complains that his matrimonial chances are very slim: we have our surmises, nevertheless. Tracy is an industrious, determined, self-reliant, even-tempered fellow, and we recommend him strongly. Grades: 93, 95, 96.

LAWRENCE DEWOODY LYLE

Σ Φ Ε

Pine Bluff, Arkansas

The "old reliable," Chuck Lyle, matriculated in 1914, and has been busily occupied in pursuing the prestigious sheepskin ever since. Now you see it, and now you don't. Besides law work he is taking French I, which with Real Property are his favorite tickets. These are not, however, his only favorites, for he has a fondness for "Sheridan's Hill," specializing in "widows."

"I intend," he remarks, "to go back to Pine Bluff, where I can again bathe my fevered brow in its balmy clime, and practice the profession, hoping the laymen will harken unto my voice." In his chosen field, criminal law, the voice is often poured forth, and "Chuck" plans to associate himself with a firm the partners of which are the biggest criminal lawyers in Pine Bluff.

He will study law at the University of Chicago this summer to prepare for the Arkansas state bar.

EVAN SIDEBOTTOM McCORD
Φ Κ Ψ; Φ Δ Φ; W F; Σ; "13"

Richmond, Kentucky

Here's a boy from right down on the farm in blue grass Kentucky, God's Country (so they say). He was a ploughboy for sixteen years, and it is hinted that continuous ploughing is responsible for his characteristic walk. Be that as it may, he has been able to walk up and take away the student body presidency, besides ambling away with many other college honors. Side took his A.B. here in 1915, and stepped immediately into law. 90, 92, 92, 92, 97.

He declares he'll practice somewhere in the United States, most likely in Texas, near or in Dallas or Houston. He claims to be a woman-hater, but why then does he frequent South Main, and appear so often accompanied?

Genial, philosophical, quaintly droll, easy-going, companionable, loving to hear or tell a joke, he is a general campus and town favorite.

ORREA O. MCCURDY
Vernon, Texas

McCurdy is the only remaining partner of McGowan and McCurdy, trading as the Texas Pals, which, we are sorry to say, did not continue this year. Mac comes from a cattle and agricultural section right at the foot of the plains. He travelled, however, by a circuitous route, stopping off five terms at Valparaiso University (Indiana) to take academic and preparatory law work.

He intends to settle somewhere in Northwest Texas, a part of the state which is being very rapidly developed. There is here much litigation growing out of boundary, oil, and mineral rights, as large ranches are being divided into small farms.

This summer Mac will take post-graduate work at the University of Chicago.

McCurdy is a Texan through and through, practical, resolute, tenacious, self-reliant, big-hearted. His determination will win him that which we wish for him—the best of success.

GUS OTTENHEIMER
Little Rock, Arkansas

Gus, our youngest, will before twenty get his degree. Moreover, he's possibly the most versatile Senior: printer, debater, waiter, prize-fighter, usher and general "goat" at the Lyric, musician, librarian, watchman, chauffeur—and student. To prevent injustice, we present some grades: 91, 93; first term Pleading 93, 96, 98. For information about Torts, see Gus himself.

This year he's "the 'beau' that bangs the 'Beanery' box"; also the Gymnasium's musical director. Winner of Debater's Medal at Washington Society's annual celebration, 1917. Bantam Weight Boxing Championship Medal.

Gus is enamored with public speaking: "I have a strong inclination for public speaking in behalf of the people, and in behalf of their rights and liberties. My great ambition is to serve the people." He will practice in Little Rock or St. Louis.

JOHN RICHARD PEERY
Pocahontas, Virginia

Peery was born in extreme Southwest Virginia two miles from the West Virginia line. Graduating as president of his class, he started in this direction but dropped off for a two-years' rest at Emory and Henry. From there he came straight to Washington and Lee in the fall of 1915, and has had less time to rest.

After passing the state bar examination in June, Peery, according to his present intentions, will take lodgment in the southeastern part of West Virginia, and will practice in Mercer and McDowell Counties, which are rich in coal and crime. In these counties there are coal mines in every hollow. Fortunately for Peery criminal law is especially attractive to him.

This Southwest Virginia must be a fine place. Listen to what Peery says about it: "Take me back to old Southwest Virginia, where women are prettiest, where liquor is best, and where the Republicans are supreme."

CHARLES GIVEN PETERS

K A; Φ Δ Φ

Union, West Virginia

After remaining a year at Randolph-Macon Academy (Front Royal), Charlie chose Hampden-Sidney for his B.A. degree. He was much interested in public speaking: won two medals, one for debating, the other for oratory; and was joint recipient of a silver loving cup for debating. Coming immediately to the law school, he has shown that his tongue has not lost its fluency. He is now president of the class. Contracts, 95-93; 2nd term Pleading, 92; 90, 90, 92, 95.

He will practice somewhere in Virginia, and plans to go into politics, something he has liked since babyhood. His nickname at Hampden-Sidney was "Politician." Charlie is one of the biggest lady-killers in college, is very fond of dancing, and loses his heart and head over every girl he sees, recovering only when he sees the next one.

HERBERT GRAYSON PETERS, JR.

Φ Γ Δ

Bristol, Virginia

In the village of Martinsville, Southwest Virginia, on the tenth of September, 1895, was born Herbert Grayson Peters. Later the Peters family moved to Bristol, Virginia (not Tennessee). Petro graduated as president of his class; then repaired to Emory and Henry for a year's further knowledge and learning.

It has been stated that Herbert was a sufferer from nostalgia. This would not seem to be true, for he came to the academic department of Washington and Lee the following fall. That year he won the History Department Scholarship. The next year, 1915, he turned to Tucker with these good results: Contracts, 93-95; 2nd term Pleading, 92; 90, 90, 90, 91, 94, 97, 97.

He contemplates practicing in Bristol with his father, a prominent Southwest Virginia lawyer. Petro's agreeable manner and capacity for hard work (such as brings results) promise for him a high position among the lawyers of this state.

TOBIAS CLEVELAND PHILLIPS

Roanoke, Virginia

"No use arguing, boys. It's Toby's money." See Toby get down close to the brick wall. Now it spins. Zip! Two bricks do honor in holding a half of it; the other boys come across. Might 's well quit when Toby joins the flippers.

He of the golden smile was born in Floyd County (Southwest Virginia, of course), a freestone land of sparkling sunshine and limpid moonshine, untouched by railroad, affording most beautiful scenery, there being a mountain out there in the shape of a buffalo. After three years at Roanoke College, he entered the local academic school, getting a 1911 degree. During the next four years he was principal successively of the Fairfield, Fleetwood, and Schuyler High Schools. Co-discover with Mr. Long of a definition of a "trust." Pleading, 90-92; 90, 91, 91, 96, 97, and 98.

He is thinking of practicing law in Bluefield, West Virginia.

JOHN J. DAVIS PRESTON

Φ Κ Ψ; Φ Δ Φ

Lewisburg, West Virginia

You've heard of "The Old Guard." haven't you? Well, here's one of them before you now. John put in his appearance in 1909 and four years later received his B.A. Thus armed he taught two years, the second year at Greenbrier Presbyterial Military School, from which he had graduated as lieutenant-adjutant in 1909. John's walk today bears the impress of his military drill.

In the student body campaign last spring John was a very active worker, his skillful work as organizer materially helping to bring his candidate victory. He might be called the Colonel House of politics, so quietly accomplished he his aim.

A self-reliant, independent man, John has a quiet quizzical humor, a preternaturally sedate air covering a keen sense of the ludicrous, an even-tempered imperturbability, and a fine sensitiveness to honor and integrity.

John last year was Executive Committeeman of the class. Grades: 92, 94, 95, 96.

SAM SILVERSTEIN

Charleston, West Virginia

In 1914 Sam came to Washington and Lee for law, but has, however, taken much academic work. He and Dave Falk have roomed together in the Dorm. for three years, and from their suite you may occasionally hear a mandolin's tinkling, for Sam is off and on an ardent performer. The facts are that he is fond of pictures and music, and on Sunday afternoons he and other devotees of art can be found assembled in his room. Besides taking a number of long trips during the year, he has been known to enjoy frequent rides to Southern Seminary with "Stretch" Pratt.

Sam will go to Columbia this fall to study corporation law for a year. His ambition is to be a mining and oil corporation lawyer. Such an opportunity will be opened to him, as he will practice in Charleston, probably with some firm. Grades: 90, 90, 91, 91, 93.

ALFRED CAMPBELL SLEMP

Olinger, Virginia

Good preparation and hard work certainly produce excellent results; which statement we prove by exhibiting Slem্প's record. Contracts, 97-94; Real Property, 94-94; Pleading, 93-90; 92, 92, 93, 93, 93, 94, 94, 95, and 96. Passing six years in preparatory and college work at Berea College (Central Kentucky), he received the degree of Bachelor of Literature. In the autumn of 1915, after a year out of school, he rode in safety over the railroad bridge at East Lexington and entered Daddy Burks' Holiest of Holies. This year he is law school book agent and our Executive Committeeman.

Can a Slem্প be other than Republican? Never. In fact, he is kin to Republican Congressman Campbell Bascom Slem্প. Moreover, he was president of the College Republican Club.

CLIFFORD M. SMITH

⊙ Δ X; Δ ⊙ Φ

Scottdale, Pennsylvania

"C. M.", our sole Pennsylvanian, prep'd at Mt. Pleasant and at Kiskiminetas, and attended Lafayette and Washington and Jefferson. Leaving study behind, Smitty began with the Frick Coal and Coke Company and, rising with unusual rapidity became assistant superintendent of the Collier Mine, near Uniontown. Later he worked with the Bi-Product Coke plant, Gary, Indiana, and before entering Washington and Lee in January, 1915, was superintendent of a battery. Being out of school many years has necessitated rather hard grinding on his part.

He will practice with Smith and Snyder, Greensburg, Pa., and as soon as he can, he will enter into the coal and coke business on the side. The real estate end of mining, especially, offers wonderful opportunities.

"C. M." is almost as much a movie fiend as Mr. Moreland himself. Regardless of war, "the Constabule" always carries his big bugle with him.

HERBERT GROOMS SMITH

A X P; Δ Θ Φ

Newport News, Virginia

Newport News is represented in Tucker Hall in the person of Herbert Smith, who in 1895 was born there some two hundred yards from the lapping, murmuring gurgitation of Hampton Roads. As graduate of the high school Smitty worked two years with the financial department of the local power company; then moved to our academic department, in which he captured the Economics Scholarship. Transferring to law, he started out to take the three-year course, but changed his mind after the first term; this year he joined Pleading and Real Property. "Error."

This "Boy" will probably study Admiralty Law after he leaves here, for, if he makes contemplated connections with a Norfolk firm, he will need to be well versed in that branch of jurisprudence.

Genial and piquantly witty, Smitty is very popular in the law school. Moreover, he has a business head and will "make good" wherever he goes.

HORACE SUTHERLAND

Φ K Ψ

Hillsville, Virginia

With a poetic name and a senatorial look, Sutherland hails from that region of pure delight, Southwest Virginia. He was born in Hillsville, Carroll County, within six hundred feet of the county courthouse, the scene of the Allen tragedy. He finished at the high school and attended Roanoke College, at Salem, Virginia, for two years. The following school session, 1911, he came to Washington and Lee and took work in academic fields. He did not return next September, but, instead, went into the drug business. In 1915 he matriculated in the law school and has been putting in his time to good advantage as shown by Contracts, 91-95; 2nd term Pleading, 93; 92, 92, 93, 95, 96, 96, and 98. "Beef" haunts the front seats in the class room, and is used very frequently by Mr. Moreland in framing hypothetical questions.

JAMES THERON WOODWARD

Σ Φ Ε; Δ Θ Φ; Μ C

Aiken, South Carolina

His father, his uncle, and his cousin having studied law at Washington and Lee, Woodward could nowhere else feel at home; and so he is here today. In these troubled times the preparation he has had is especially valuable. He has had four years of military training at Clemson, and was captain of a company there in his graduating year. After finishing Clemson, he spent two years as assistant engineer for the United States government.

Woody is Vice-President of the Masonic Club. Grades: 90, 91, 93, 97. Georgia or South Carolina will be his future home, and we do not mind saying that he has strong heart-interests in South Carolina.

Woodward is another Senior who is very fond of anything feminine. Let the strains of music be wafted on the breeze, and he's a "goner."

WILLIAM BURBRIDGE YANCEY

Yancey's home is a pretty little town some sixty miles down the Valley of Virginia, three or four hours' ride via the B. and O. Bill attended Harrisonburg High; came then to V. M. I. the year the typhoid epidemic broke out, necessitating the dismissal of both schools here. He himself was a victim. He studied the next year at the University of Virginia. For two years he was on a Norfolk and Western engineering corps. Later on he returned to Harrisonburg and, being a big-hearted chap as well as a good talker and mixer, engaged very successfully in soliciting life insurance. He then decided to study law. Bill is vice-president of the class.

DON DUANE CUNNINGHAM
A X P

Hendricks, West Virginia

He with the magnifico or hildago name had Jobe on Cheat River in the panhandle of West Virginia as his birthplace. He has since, however, moved to a less suggestive spot, Hendricks. For a while the West Virginia Preparatory School claimed Don, but he could at length resist no longer the lure of Washington and Lee, where he craved oyer of Mr. Momaw's vigorous elucidations and longed to see Mr. Long practicing, with deft movements, his famous backhand breast stroke.

Planning to practice with a firm engaged in railroad corporation law for the Western Maryland Railway, Don is also gazing aslant at politics, in fact has his eye on the prosecuting attorneyship for Randolph County. Even more pertinent, he will be a Republican among Republicans and now stands in well with the "big bugs." He has stayed by the colors in college, being a member of the College Republican Club.

LOY DILLARD ESTES
K Σ; Φ Δ Φ; Π Α Ν
Cumby, Texas

If the world rates as benefactor the man who makes two blades of grass grow where only one grew before, how about him who makes ten words fit where only one fitted before????!! Such a man we have before us. "Dip" claims to be only an amateur, but for our part we believe that he is a verbosity-artist of the first water and of the twenty-third degree. When it comes to loquacity, garrulity, and volubility, we hand the palm to Estes.

He favors going into politics, having a fine chance to be a (Texas) state legislator within two years since he is lined up with the Powers That Be. His aim is to get into national politics.

He is one of the originators of the W. and L. comedy Players and is this year Assistant Editor-in-Chief of the Calyx. Copia verborum.

WILLIAM GLENN EDWARDS

Eona, Virginia

Our sole legislator, Carroll County's representative to the Virginia House of Delegates!!!

Graduating from Woodlawn High School as Class Poet, he entered the academic school in 1911. Later he transferred to law and partially finished the course. After several years' absence he has returned for his degree.

Glenn is Republican through and through, is fond of politics, and fully expects to go to Congress from the Fifth District.

Besides being author of several bills and member of several committees, he says that he saved Virginia $50,000 by frequently calling, "Pending Question," thus cutting off costly debate. The House of Delegates' time is worth $500 an hour.

His term expires this year, but he will probably run again, if for no other reason than to defeat the Co-ordinate College Bill. He claims the credit for defeating it at the past session. In passing, Edwards is for woman suffrage.

WILLIE LEE JOYCE

Shuff, Virginia

Having spent two and a third years here, Joyce is now in the Columbia University Law School, and he intends to return there next year for further study. Before coming to Washington and Lee he attended Piedmont College and William and Mary.

Corporation law has appealed to him more than any other branch of law, and he, therefore, intends to specialize and practice in it on leaving Columbia.

By preference and inclination Joyce is a Democrat now, henceforth, and forever more. He says: "Things of a political nature appeal to me more strongly, probably, than anything else; consequently, if a favorable opportunity ever presents itself, I shall be very apt to enter politics."

He is an ardent admirer of anything feminine, and with his sempiternal smile, his prospects are bright.

Class History

IT was a noble band of eighty embryonic legalities that assembled in one of the rooms of Tucker Hall, on September 12, 1917, to receive the initial benediction of "Daddy" Burks. Men were there from "Mississippi to Clyde," and written indelibly upon the visage of each was an unswerving purpose. We would face the impending struggle with calmness and confidence; we would leave a record at Washington and Lee long to be remembered and emulated. With such youthful aspirations, and with a marked degree of complacency, we listened attentively to Mr. Burks. He warned us against innumerable pitfalls, and ended by impressing upon us the fact that the law library was open from six in the morning till twelve o'clock at night, and that he had been informed by fairly good students that the best time to do work in the library was in the morning after breakfast, from six-thirty till nine. Of course, all of us have since learned that this is true, for during those hours it is serenely quiet in the library and one studying there is seldom disturbed.

Many of our number had often heard of Scylla and Charybdis. We found, however, upon our entry here, that these two fearful menaces, in the legal vernacular, are no other than Contracts and Real Property, respectively. We had also been repeatedly warned against the luring lights and mesmerizing music of the famous Lexington Siren—the Lyric! From a time "when the memory of man runneth not to the contrary" this dreaded monster has infested the beautiful City of Lexington, and many are the tales that are told of youths who have been enticed into her labyrinths never to return. With these premonitions ringing in our ears we began to apply ourselves assiduously to the study of law. The dignified seniors smiled upon us sympathetically. We looked at them and wondered. They were anchored beyond the gale, as we thought, and it was our ambition to attain a similar success.

But alas! that fateful fifteenth of December—the merciless Scylla, very ruthlessly, reached out and grabbed us! For many hours she relentlessly munched and munched; and when we were finally able to extricate our mangled minds from her grasp, we were horrified to learn that about half the class had experienced an inexpressable shock! But this is not the whole story, gentle reader—the rest is pleasanter to relate. We learned later that there had loomed up in our midst "men of the hour" who had broken all previous records for grade making, covered themselves with glory, and given the Ring Tum Phi adequate subject matter for an interesting topic of discussion.

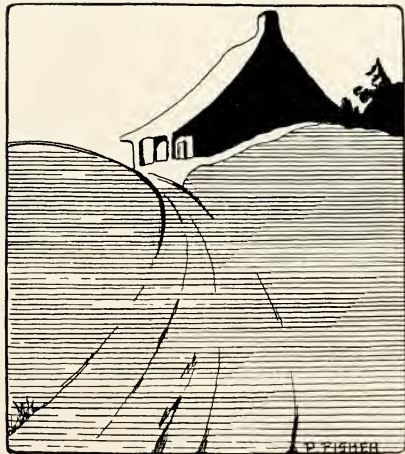

Upon our return after Christmas "Daddy" Burks again called us together. He briefly touched upon the work of the first term—and his brevity regarding that subject was greatly appreciated! With a commendable tribute to our scholastic heroes and consoling words to the rest of us, he bade the class set to work with "refreshed hope and renewed vigor." We thereupon resolved to adopt Ulysses' method, stop up our ears with wax, and heed not the call of the Lexington Siren. So far, the plan has worked successfully. Although we have not yet passed the treacherous Charybdis, we feel confident that none of our number will be left on the bone-strewn strand.

In Athletics the Junior Law Class has distinguished itself beyond our expectation. In both football and basket ball our class is reckoned as one of the Generals' most valuable sources of supply. With modest pride we mention the significant fact that six of the eleven regular football men and three of the basket ball quint were chosen from the Junior Law Class.

Thus, we feel that we have left for those who are to come an imitable record. Nor is it amiss to "dip into the future far as human eye can see" and predict that every member of our class will be heard from, and the names of some emblazoned among the Nation's Great.

Senior Academic Class History

THE Class of 1917 has the distinction of having been the first to enter under the administration of Dr. H. L. Smith. When the President saw us drop off the train one by one in the fall of 1913, he was so struck with our prepossessing appearance that the next day in his address at the formal opening of the University he spoke of us as "the Cream of the South." The term has since become a byword on the campus, and many are the classes that have since laid claim to the title.

We entered 170 strong, but as the years of toil and change have come and gone, many of our classmates have left this town of traditions and now the class of 1917 numbers but forty-two men. Many of our men have gone into the Law and Engineering Schools, and are there leading in their work. Of those that remain, we point with pride to their class record for the year 1916-1917—in the classroom, where we have many men of high records, in athletics, where we carried off the basketball championship; and finally in forensics, where we won the class debates. In our individual work, we have been represented in every branch of athletics for the full four years. In the present year, we have had four men on the Varsity football team, one on Varsity basket ball, four in track, and two in baseball. We have the captaincy of football, baseball and two crews. We boast with pride of Varsity managers of football, basket ball, baseball, track and crew. Scholastically, four of our men have an average of ninety for the four years of our history. Socially, we have always been prominent, and in all campus activities the class of 1917 has made its influence felt.

As to the future, our members are going to enter the highest of modern occupations. Ten will take up medicine, ten law, five banking, two chemistry, one U. S. Consular service, two Christian work, seven Business, and only seven are undecided as to their life work.

Thus runs the record of the Academic Class of 1917. It is a class that filled with loyalty to Washington and Lee, has done all in its power to keep her pure traditions unsullied, and that will in the future strive to widen still further the broad dimensions of service that have been set by her great Alumni.

GEORGE HOLBROOK BARBER

"13" Club; Σ; Σ A E; Π A N; Θ N E;
M C

Brooklyn, N. Y.

We start off with the only real distinguished member of the class, George Holbrook Barber. Why this exalted position? Because he is the only one of us that has already launched on the sea of matrimony. Brooks hails from Yankeeland and came to Washington and Lee back in the forgotten "good old days." After capturing all the social honors here he was out of school for several years. In 1916 he came back to the campus and has been primarily a student these last two years. Brook prepped at Poly Preparatory School and afterwards attended the Polytechnic Institute, both of New York City. Columbia will have the honor of training him in Medicine for the next four years. A member of the Cotillion Club, Masonic Club, "13" Club, and other social organizations show us that Barber has been a very popular man on the campus. During the last two years his grades have been the very highest.

HENRY JACKSON BLACKFORD

Σ Φ E; Θ Δ K

Bordone, W. Va.

"Blackie" prepped at the Charlestown, High School, Charlestown, W. Va., entering Washington and Lee in 1913. For four years him has been on the "intellectual gridiron." In Chemistry especially has Blackford proved himself a "shark" and has been an assistant for two years. Henry has not been a "bone" while here but has taken an active part in track and Y. M. C. A. work, and has won distinction in both fields. "Blackie" expects to be a chemist. Cross Country Team, 1915; Y. M. C. A. Cabinet, 1916-1917; Exchange Editor of the Southern Collegian; Geology Scholarship, 1914; Bradford Scholarship; and Chemistry Assistant, 1915-1916, and 1916-1917.

JOHN WITHERS BLAKE
Tampa, Fla.

If we had to pick out the hardest worker in the class we would more than likely present John Withers Blake. He tells us that he was born July 27, 1895, in Tampa, Fla., and that he finished at the Hillsboro High School in 1914. In September of the same year he came to Washington and Lee to get his preparation for the study of Medicine. He has become such a familiar figure in all the laboratories that we are not surprised that he makes good grades. Blake is going up to Johns Hopkins next year to study Medicine and all those picked men, that they claim to have, will have to hustle if they keep up with him, because he says that he is going to work for sure when he gets there.

ADRIAN HARRIS BOYD
K Σ; C C; "13 Club"; Σ; Π A N
Covington, Tenn.

"Adie" is a Tennessean by birth. Yes, and the date of his birth? Ah! that accounts for his strong character, January 19, 1896. He graduated from the Byars Hall High School, and entered Washington and Lee in 1913, taking the course known to all good students as the "campus course" and for four long years has labored toward the attainment of a degree. Boyd did not permit his studies to take too much of his time as is shown by his college activities. Manager of the Ring Tum Phi, 1916; President of "13" Club, 1917; Assistant Manager of Football, 1915; Member of the Athletic Council, 1917; Member of Final Week Committee, 1917; Secretary-Treasurer of the Cotillion Club, 1917.

WILLIAM HENRY BRANDON

Φ Δ Θ

Lewisburg, Tenn.

Back in the last years of the 19th century, October the 4th, 1895, to be exact, William Henry Brandon made his debut on this terrestrial globe. It took only a few years for the village school to find out that Bill was a very talented youth. Thus he was sent to the Haynes McLean Training School and then to the Mooresville Training School. Naturally, with such preparation, a good college must be selected, so one day Bill happened to meet Noble Doak on the old cross road and in a few moments his fate was settled. Since he landed here he has been a hard worker but has not failed to make many friends, and is one of the best known and best liked men in college. Always out for every class team and the varsity—even though he has always carried one of the hardest courses in college—he has revealed to all of us the generous and unselfish character that he possesses.

EDWARD PARRY BROWNING, JR.

K A

Maysville, Kentucky

"Judge" was born and raised in the famous blue grass state, appearing in this great world September 23, 1895, at Maysville, Ky. Although born in a state noted for its liquor, beautiful women and fast horses, Judge shies from the first two and would make a spectacle upon the last. Still, he has the old Kentucky "Colonel Air" to a remarkable degree. He has always been a consistent student, and undoubtedly will carry away a sheepskin in June. He expects to make law his life-work. Here's hoping that he may be able to retain the "Judge" before his name without the quotation marks.

WILLIAM OLIN BURTNER

O Δ K

Harrisonburg, Va.

"Burt" says that he may go into politics, and judging from the forensic fame that he has won in the halls of old "Wash," we predict success for him in the stump speech line. After a four years' term at the Harrisonburg High School, he took passage on the toiling B. & O. for Lexington. While at W. & L., Burt has been a student in the true sense. He is taking his degree in three years with a preponderance of A's. Unlike many sharks, Burt frequently visits the gym, where he has made quite a name for himself as a wrestler. He will return next year for his Master's degree. Sophomore Debating Team, 1916; Senior Debating Team, 1917; Debater in Annual Celebration of Wash. Literary Society, 1916 and 1917; Secretary, Critic and President of Washington Literary Society; Young Scholarship in Philosophy, 1916; Secretary and Treasurer, Senior Class; Albert Sidney Boat Club; Y. M. C. A. Cabinet, 1916-'17; Deutscher Verein, 1916-'17.

WILLIAM R. BURTON

Σ A E; W F; C C; "13" Club; Σ

Brooklyn, N. Y.

Born in Brooklyn, N. Y., January 30, 1895, prepared for college at Poly Preparatory School, entered W. & L. in September 1913. Such is the brief history of William R. Burton. "Rickey" is one of the best known men in the class, and has been foremost in the social life of college but has not quit at this. In athletics he has always been a hard worker, holding a trident in basket ball and doing faithful service in baseball. Burton says he is going to be a banker. "Rickey" has not failed to make lots of friends nor to carry some of the highest honors, as the following will show: President of the Cotillion Club, '16-'17; Athletic Council, '15-'16; Basket Ball, '15-'16; Member of the Sigma Honorary Fraternity.

JOSEPH RICHARD CAMPBELL
Σ X; Π A N
Marion, Va.

About 21 years ago, somewhere in Virginia, the announcement was made that Joseph Richard Campbell had come to brighten the village. But this small town proved too small and slow to hold this ambitious youngster, and just as soon as he finished the High School at Marion, Va., he had his parents move to Pennsylvania. Washington and Lee campus was graced by his countenance for the first time in September, 1913. Campbell is an easy-going fellow and has not taken a very active part in college activities, but his democratic spirit and open friendliness has won for him a host of friends. "Dick" says that he has not decided what he will do after graduation, but war permitting we are sure that he will be a success in whatever line of work that he takes up.

JACKSON ROSSE COLLINS
Centreville, Md.

Jackson first hailed the world December 17, 1894. He comes from Centreville, Md., and has always retained his Eastern Sho' brogue. Jackson got his preparatory education at the Centreville High School and then decided that he would enter the best school in the South, so he came to W. & L. in 1914. Since then Jackson has been given much to work and little to play but it has failed to make Jack a dull boy, for when there are any grades to be had he generally gets them. Jackson has gotten his degree in three years which is proof that he has not idled much time. In the Physics Department he has made quite a name for himself, and we are sure that he is fully prepared for any emergency in life, because in this department it is the case of the survival of the fittest. Jackson has won so much fame in old Wash. Literary Society that he has decided to study Law. He has held several offices in the Literary Society, and the Maryland Club.

WILLIAM JUNKIN COX
Φ Γ Δ; Ο Δ Κ; Δ Σ Ρ; Π Α Ν
Lexington, Va.

Billy whetted his literary appetite on the Lexington High School and entered Washington and Lee in 1913. While you would never suspect it this young man is a pig. For further reference look below. Not content with hitting the intellectual bull's-eye for four years, Billy is habitually shocking the finer susceptibilities of the faculty by his editorials, the public by his lack of decorum, and the visiting young ladies by his dancing. What he will do is undetermined, but he will probably make engineering his profession. Physics Scholarship, '13-'14; Franklin Society Scholarship, '14-'15; Bradford Scholarship, '15-'16; Pres. Graham-Lee, '15-'16; Winner Graham-Lee Debaters Medal, '16; Ring Tum Phi Staff, '14-'15; '15-'16; Editor-in-Chief, '16-'17; President of Circle, '16-'17; President Delta Sigma Rho, '16-'17; Historian of Junior Class, '15-'16; Valedictorian of Senior class, '16-'17; Treasurer, Y. M. C. A., '16-'17; Y. M. C. A. Council, '15-'16 '16-'17; Debating Council, '16; Varsity Debating Team, '16; Member Final Week Com., '17; Got "A" in every ticket Soph. and Junior years.

ROBERT GLENN CRAIG
Φ Δ Θ

Cuthbert, Georgia

Robert Glen Craig says that September 29, 1897, is the most important date that can be recorded so far as it concerns him; and that Cuthbert, Georgia, is honored to call him her son. Craig is one of the most widely known men in college, although he has been with us only two years, having taken two years of college work at Marion Institute, Marion, Alabama. He is an excellent student as is proved when we tell you that he makes the very best grades on Dr. Hoyt's unreasonable Biology 2 and on Dr. Stevens' Physics I. In spite of all the hard work that he has taken Craig has found time to go out for every class team.

ARCHIE EDWARD CRUTHIRDS
Handsboro, Miss.

"Two-Thirds," as he is known by his intimate friends, is one of our most diligent workers. He first kicked the cradle in Handsboro, Mississippi, about twenty-two years ago. After finishing at the Gulfport High School, "Two-Thirds" entered Washington and Lee in 1914 and found the work so interesting and easy that he decided to finish in three years. He is a member of the Graham-Lee Literary Society, having held various officers therein. He will return next year to take his M.A. After that, he expects to study law or medicine. Whether he harangues a jury or helps the undertaker, we expect Cruthirds to make a success, for someone—probably Granny Campbell—has told us that the world likes the diligent worker.

JOHN LEVERING EARLY
Staunton, Va.

This erudite scholar was born at Staunton, Virginia, on December 19, 1896. After graduating from the Staunton High School, he spent several years at Asbury College, N. C. While there, he excelled in the realm of Demosthenes. In the fall of 1916, John came via the Valley Special to Lexington. Since entering Washington and Lee, he has made a record for himself not only on the rostrum but on the Intellectual Gridiron as well, holding a place on Dr. Smith's honor list. He has even overcome the hardness of Harry's rocks in Geology 2—a ticket calculated to make a shark shudder. Senior Class Debater and Winner of Medal, Orator Graham-Lee Celebration, 1917.

FRANK JOHNSON GILLIAM

Σ A E; Π A N; O Δ K

Lynchburg, Va.

"Heine," a true Hill City product, was born in the spring of 1895. In his early youth he gained beauty of physique and a rare quality of determination in overcoming the 999 hills of Lynchburg. Later, he entered the Augusta Military Academy, and having graduated thence with honors, arrived at Lexington in the fall of 1913. Ever striving for the betterment of Washington and Lee, Heine soon won his place in the hearts of all. One remarkable thing about our hero is that he never—no, never—mixes in campus politics. His honors are: Historian, Sophomore Class; Advertising Manager, Calyx, 1915; Calyx Staff, '17; Ring Tum Phi Staff, '15-'16-'17; Secretary, Student Body, '16; Y. M. C. A. Cabinet, '15; Vice-President, Y. M. C. A., '16; President, Y. M. C. A., '17; History Scholarship, '14; English Scholarship, '15; Class Football, '16, '17; Manager of Basket Ball, '17.

JOHN BONNER GLADNEY

A T O; Π A N; C C; "13" Club

New Orleans, La.

John Bonner Gladney was born March 30, 1895, in Bastrop, La., but has lived in New Orleans since 1912. Bonner attended the Morehouse High School and Rugby Academy in New Orleans. Since entering Washington and Lee he has been a leader in nearly every phase of college life. Gladney has taken an active part in track and managed the Varsity track team in 1916-'17. In his class he has done his part, having held various offices and represented '17 in almost every team. He expects to study law and we are confident of his success. While here he has been manager of Class Basket Ball, '14; Class Football, '14-'15; Class Track, '14-'15-'16; Executive Committee, '15-'16; Assistant Track Manager, '15-'16; Manager of Track, '16-'17; Track Team, '15-'16.

CECIL CONARD GRAVES
Stanley, Va.

A new man not so well known as some, but to know him is to like him. He gives the impression of "still water running deep." After graduating at the William and Mary Prep. School he entered Roanoke College. He soon became weary of the modernness of the magic city and returned to traditions and a historic past at William and Mary College. Cecil did not find the infatuation so great as he had thought as some things had happened—for his malady moonshine is not an antidote. He entered Washington and Lee for his senior work, having done the most of his undergraduate work at William and Mary. He has proved himself a diligent and capable student.

EDGAR FREDERICK GROSSMAN
T C ; O Δ K ; M C
St. Augustine, Fla.

"Gross" had made so many trips across the ocean before he turned up at Washington and Lee that all the Freshmen thought him a native son of the Fatherland, but actually he was born in St. Augustine, Fla., and has always made that his home. Gross had had his finger in more than one pie since he came here. Not only in the classroom has he been heard from but on the Gym floor as well. No man has done more for the good of his class and Alma Mater than Gross; he has given several years' service in training the Freshmen in the various exercises in the gymnasium. Here are a few of the things that he has accomplished: German Scholarship, '14-'15; Ring Tum Staff, '15, '16 and '17; Southern Collegian Staff, '16-'17; Secretary, Y. M. C. A., '16-'17; Y. M. C. A. Cabinet, '15-'16, '16-'17; Secretary of Masonic Club, '17; Assistant in Biology, '16-'17; Assistant in Chemistry, '16-'17; Member of the Harry Lee Boat Club; Deutscher Verein; and Washington Literary Society; and winner of quite a few swimming medals. Grossman will return next year for his M.A. degree.

WILLIS COBB HAGAN
Φ Γ Δ; W F; C C; "13" Club
Roanoke, Va.

This cheerful specimen is one of the most familiar and distinctly individual men on the campus. Bill is, indeed, the "Rah, Rah, Willie" college boy, that we hear so much about, for he holds the exalted position of student cheer leader. Born in Atlanta, Georgia, five years before the dawn of the twentieth century, Bill was a victim of the "Wanderlust" and landed in Roanoke, Va. There he grew in manhood and vigor, and having completed the local high school course, came to Washington and Lee in the fall of 1913. Since then he has led an active life on the campus and won not a few friends. Cheer Leader, '17; Three in Harry Lee Boat, '16; and Crew Manager, '16-'17.

THOMAS ROWAN HAMILTON
Okolona, Miss.

September, 1913, brought to W. & L. another man from the far south, Thomas Rowan Hamilton. Tommy gives Okolona, Mississippi, as the place of his birth and September 21, 1896, as the date. He is a graduate of the Houston High School, Houston, Miss. Since entering college Tommy has followed several lines of study and even now at graduation has not decided on what line of work he will take up. He has been one of Dr. Easter's stand-bys in French and succeeded in carrying off the English Scholarship in '15-'16. Tommy is a loyal member of old Wash. Literary Society in which he has held various positions. Next to studying Chaucer's "Miller's Tale," his chief diversion is the Lyric.

MORRIS HAMLET HESTER
Lynchburg, Va.

Born in Alabama, June 30, 1894, but has spent most of his life in Lynchburg, Va., is the way Morris Hamlet Hester tells us the whereabouts of his life. Hester is one of those few men who are willing to work hard enough to get their degree in three years. He tells us that he is a member of the Lynchburg Club but we could have inferred that, because we never see him that he is not with at least three "Hill City" boys. Everyone that is acquainted with Hester will agree that a more genial friend could not be found. Law is his chosen field of work, and confidentially we will tell you that he is going to locate in his own home town, not only because it is the richest city for its size in the country but primarily because it is the temporary residence of so many pretty girls from which to pick a partner. Of course we know that he finished at the Lynchburg High School.

SAMUEL PALMER HILEMAN
Kerrs Creek, Va.

Let us introduce you to another Doctor of Medicine, Samuel Palmer Hileman of Kerrs Creek, Va. Palmer got his preparatory education at the Riverside High School, at Rockbridge Baths, and entered W. & L. in 1913. Since then he has spent most of his time in the laboratories of the University. Winning the Biology Scholarship in '14-'15, he has kept up this good record in all of his science studies. He is Secretary and Treasurer of the Chem Society and is an assistant in Organic Chemistry. Palmer expects to enter a medical school next year and we will be surprised if he does not lead his class. He is one of the best arguments we have against the "rah! rah!" conception of the college man.

CURTIS CARLYLE HUMPHRIS

Lexington, Va.

Curtis Carlyle Humphris is proud that he can claim Northeast Lexington as the place of his nativity. Born October 30, 1895, and prepared for college at the Lexington High School, he entered W. & L. in 1913. Living on the very banks of North River it is natural that Curtis should become quite an oarsman. He held down the bow of the victorious Albert Sidney Varsity boat. Curtis has taken an active part in all class teams and has represented '17 in football and basket ball every year. Humphris is taking a B.A. degree and has specialized in commerce; he expects to go in business as his life work. Curtis has been: President of Albert Sidney Boat Club, '16-'17; Varsity Crew, '16; 2nd Crew, '15, '16; Class Basket Ball, '15, '16, '17; Manager Class Basket Ball Team, '16; Vice-President, Rockbridge Club.

HOMER AUGUSTUS JONES

Φ Γ Δ

Bristol, Va.

This promising young adjunct of the commerce department first saw the light of day in 1896, Bristol, Va., being the favored of the locality. He picked up his preliminary education in the Bristol High School. In 1913 he entered Washington and Lee, and admiring the scholarly aspect of the members of the registration committee, he immediately set out to put a few dents in the honor roll himself. His subsequent efforts have been largely devoted to that end and with such success that ever since then he has been able to persuade the committee on scholarships to excuse him from the payment of tuition. During the past session he has held the assistantship in the Commerce Department.

Noisy expects to settle in Bristol and there masquerade as a banker while acquiring possession of the town. He has held the scholarship in Economics Department in '13-'14; and French scholarship in '14-'15.

JAMES AUGUSTIN LEE
New Iberia, La.

Sugarcane is not the only sweet export of Louisiana—look at the subject of this. He was first heard of on the evening of the seventh of August, 1895. Jimmie is the oldest man of the new type. He came to W. & L. in 1912 and is the only man to have the honor of being both the President and Vice-President of the Senior Class—this was accomplished only by a strict adherence to Dr. "S" Stevens' curve. A politician of a unique type as is shown by the various offices that Jimmie has held. His constant smile has been amply rewarded by the honors he has been awarded: Assistant in Chemistry, '15, '16, '17; Class Football, three years; Treasurer, Historian, Vice-President, and President of his class; various committees for dances; and President of the Chemical Society, '15-'16. Jimmie is already quite noted as a Chemist and naturally he expects to take up Chemistry as his life work.

JOHN ALEXANDER MAHONEY, JR.

Φ Γ Δ

He really was born in Greenville, Tenn., although to hear him talk one would think that he had spent all his life at Emory and Henry. As a child he was very quiet but the Bristol High School soon showed him to be a genius in the use of words. After careful deliberation his fond parents decided to send this youthful prodigy to Emory and Henry. And lo! in September, 1916, the sacred halls of Washington and Lee were startled by a sound halfway between a laugh and a bray and Johnnie had arrived here. While here he has spent his time trying to prove that what is isn't and that what isn't, is. His staccato peals of laughter have made study impossible in the Commerce Library, and the lectures of Dr. Campbell almost profane. He intends to enter business with his father in Bristol.

Elsewhere in this book we shall speak of Bob as one who carries the whole world on his shoulders. It is true, for since this young West Virginian entered Washington and Lee in the fall of 1912, larger and larger tasks have fallen into his capable hands as the years have passed by. Last year he managed in excellent style the famous team that gave Cornell an extremely uncomfortable feeling on her own field. This year, besides being of valuable assistance to Manager Waters in the building of the 1917 schedule, Bob has been active in many things. He led the beautiful Durbar Hall Masque. He has done valuable service on the Y. M. C. A. Cabinet. Among the many honors deservedly received by this young Atlas are: Executive Committee, '12-'13; Manager Freshman Football Team; President Sophomore Class; Assistant Manager, Calyx, '14; Manager, Football Team, '15; Member Y. M. C. A. Cabinet, '16-'17; Leader and Committeeman of innumerable dances.

CHARLES WALLACE McNITT

Cold Water, Mich.

Trident Club

"Sunny Side Farm," Cold Water, Michigan, is the kind of combination that can not be beat. Charley holds the two-mile record at W. & L. Moreover, Charley has found time to go out for every class team and to represent W. & L. almost every year since he entered. He has been one of the most popular men in the class and has held some of the best class offices. Some of the things "Mac" has done: Cross Country Team, '14, '15 and '16; Track Team, '15-'15; '15-'16, '16-'17; Secretary and Treasurer of Junior Class; Ex-Committee of Senior Class, '17; Ring Tum Phi Staff, '16-'17; Glee Club, '16-'17; Harry Lee Boat Club; Deutscher Verein, '16-'17; Graham-Lee Literary Society.

ROBERT BRUCE MORRISON
Murat, Va.

This is to introduce you to another product of Rockbridge County. Born at Murat, Va., November 14, 1895, he has passed most of his life in this end of the Shenandoah Valley. Bruce has a distinct advantage over the rest of the students, in that he is the son of the sheriff. He tells us that he got all his preparatory work at the Murat High School and that he entered the University in the fall of 1913. If you have ever been up the main street of Lexington you are sure to have seen him, because most of his spare moments are spent at Waylands. As a side line, Bruce is quite a shark at suicide. This is the summary that Morrison has given us: "Have played class football and basket ball and have interested myself in all activities intended for the good of the class and the university." After studying law he expects to go into business.

ALEXANDER GALLATIN PAXTON, JR.

Greenville, Miss.

Behold the Manager! "Galla" was born in the fall of the year of our Lord 1896 in that town of Civil War fame, known as Vicksburg, Mississippi. After graduating from the Greenville High School in June of 1913, he entered Washington and Lee, and straightway endeared himself to every man on the campus. It is Galla's motto to have many friends, and his popularity has not been dimmed by even his work of collecting simoleons for the Calyx, and we believe that the public will admit that that means quite a bit. Galla tells us that in the near future his life work will be that of "High Private in Rear Ranks," but that should he escape the Kaiser's Kultur, he will eventually go into the cotton business. His honors are in part: Football Team, '16; Secretary, Athletic Council, '15-'16; President, Junior Class; Captain, Class Basket Ball, '17; Leader, Inter-Fraternity Dance, '17; and Manager of Calyx, '17.

KEITH CHILTON RICE
Morristown, Tenn.

A. D. November 7, 1894, is the date when Keith C. Rice made his entrance into the society of Morristown, Tenn. He came to W. & L. in 1914 after finishing at the Morristown High School. "Rabbit," as he is called by everyone that knows him, is an excellent student and succeeds in keeping on the right side of the list when it comes to grades. In Organic Chemistry he became famous as the only real shark, being the only man to make "A" in the entire class. Rabbit has already had his application accepted at Johns Hopkins and expects to enter there next year. We expect great things from him because, as he says, he was not given that "Webster"-like head for no purpose. While here Rice has been a member of the Mandolin Club, and the Chemical Society.

ERNEST CLAY SHULL
Winchester, Va.

"Fats," the heavyweight of the class, was born on the Cedar Creek battle ground near Winchester, Virginia, some twenty-three years ago. As for the date, it was August 17. After graduating from the Winchester center of knowledge, he migrated South like all other birds do in the fall and the opening day of 1913-'14 found him here at W. & L. Right here he has been ever since. Although we do not find his name on the intellectual grid-iron, it is understodd that Dr. Smith consults him, even on the most confidential matters concerning the management of the institution. But besides having so great a responsibility on his shoulders he has found time to indulge in college activities: Class Football, three years; Basket Ball, one year; Historian of the Senior Class; Member of the Final Ball Reception Committee; and Senior Ball Invitation Committee. We regret very much that "Fats" will not be back next year but we are sure of his success wherever he might be. He expects to study medicine at the "University of Berlin."

EDWARD SIMPSON SMITH

O Δ K

Frederick, Md.

"Smitty" was reared in Frederick, Maryland, claiming that February 2, 1896, was the date of his birth. After completing the course at the Boys' High School in Frederick, he entered W. & L. Smitty has done as much for the glory of '17 as any other man in it. As a debater and student he has always stood out eminently. After teaching a year he expects to study law at the University of Maryland. Besides his B.A. Smith gets a certificate in commerce. Treasurer of Washington Literary Society, '14-'15; Ring Tum Phi Reporter and Staff, all four years; State Oratorical Contest, '15; Associate Editor of the Southern Collegian, '15-'16; Secretary of Mock Convention, '16; Member of the University Debating Council; President of the Maryland Club; various dance committees; Class Football and Basket Ball Teams; Santini Medal, '16; Author of "The Colonial Policy of the United States"; Luther Sewers Birley Scholarship, '15-'16; Member and Manager of Class Debating Team, '15-'16.

CHARLES RIDDLE STRIBLING, JR.

Φ Γ Δ; Π Α Ν

Petersburg, Va.

Charles made his entrance into life at Berryville, Va., and gives the year as 1897. For a time he rested in the high schools of Wanesboro and Petersburg, but came here in 1913 to steep his mind in classic lore while gladdening the hearts of the girls of Lexington. That he has won the James White Scholarship for proficiency in advanced Greek is sufficient testimony to his success in his first endeavor.

As to what he will do he says he is undecided. Charlie is President of the Harry Lee Boat Club this year; and has been on the Calyx Staff; and on the Harry Lee Second Crew for the past two years, but he will be a wearer of the monogram after this season.

MARSHALL GORDON TWYMAN
Σ X; W F
Fincastle, Va.

Marshall Gordon Twyman says that he made Fincastle, Va., famous on September 10, 1893. Twyman had ambition to be a sailor, so after he had finished at the Fincastle High School, he tried his luck at the Army and Navy Preparatory School but due to some eye trouble he was unable to gain admittance in the Naval Academy. So after staying out of school for two years he came to Washington and Lee and has been a well-known figure here for the last three years. Twyman is the first man to tell us that he expects to be a farmer, and we are not so sure that he has not chosen the best life of any of us, and if the prices stay where they are now certainly it will be a profitable calling. On the campus and in all social activities he has become a well known figure and has made many friends here that will regret his not coming back to W. & L. next year.

JESSE BORING WADSWORTH, JR.
A T Ω; W F; C C; "13" Club
Birmingham, Alabama

A. D. 1895 marks the date of Jesse's nativity. Our hero comes from Birmingham, Alabama. After finishing at the Birmingham Training School, Jess went to Birmingham Prep. and thence to Washington and Lee in 1913. Since then, his life has testified to the truth of his motto: "Try to do a little of everything and do it well." Football Squad, '13, '14, '15; Varsity, '16; Basket Ball Squad, '14, '15, '16; Track Squad, '15; Baseball Squad, '17; Manager Baseball, '17; Captain, Freshman Football, '13; Leader Sophomore Cotillion, '14; Executive Committeeman Final Ball, three years; Calyx Staff, '16; Harry Lee Squad, '16; Leader, P. A. N.-White Friar Dance, '17; Glee Club, '16-'17; President, White Friar, '17; Secretary and Treasurer, "13" Club; Monogram Club; Manager Glee Club, '17. Jess expects to take up banking or some other line of commercial work.

THEODORE COOKE WATERS

Φ K Σ; "13" Club; Π A N; C C
Baltimore, Maryland

The date that this genius made his bow to this world is December 19, 1897, and the place is Baltimore, Maryland. If we were to pick out one thing in which "Ted" stands out prominently, it would be as a business man. During his stay at W. & L. he has always been in some sort of managerial work. From the above we might think that this was his only vocation but we would be wrong, for as a social leader he stands out prominently. "Ted" prepped at S. M. A. and entered Washington and Lee in the fall of 1913. Waters was manager of one of the best teams that we have ever had. He has also been a member of the Athletic Council. Law is his chosen field of work, and we can feel sure that he has a successful career before him.

WILLIAM CALVIN WELLS

K Σ

Wilmington, North Carolina

"Billy" was born November 1, 1896, in the nearby town of Staunton. Later, he migrated to Wilmington, N. C., where he received his prep school training in the local high school. After spending two years at Millsaps College, Jackson, Mississippi, Billy could stand it no longer and decided to come to a regular school. Accordingly, he entered Washington and Lee in the fall of 1915. It was not long before Billy made his presence felt, and he soon made many good friends. Considering the short time that he has been in Lexington, he has taken hold of many campus activities and has acquitted himself well in all. He expects to go into the study of the law at Harvard University. While we hate to lose Billy, we wish him the best of luck and have not the slightest doubt that success awaits him. Class Football, '15-'16, '16-'17; Class Basketball '15-'16; Manager, Senior Football, '16-'17; Calyx Staff, '16-'17; Secretary and Treasurer, Student Body, '16-'17.

JAMES JONES WHITE

Lexington, Va.

To know James Jones White is to like him. Born here in the famous "city" of Lexington and living under the wonderful influence of the Presbyterian Church it is no wonder that he has managed to grow up to be a model young man and student, as is shown by his ability to get his B.A. degree in three years. As a "Suicide" player his equal can hardly be found. White expects to be a banker; let us hope that he will locate here so he can honor some of the numerous checks that are passed at McCrums that might be just a "little" bit overdrawn. Confidently Jim was born on December 21, 1897, and was prepared for college at the Lexington High School. Jim is a member of the Harry Lee Boat Club and has rowed on the second crew last season, he also is a member of the Glee Club.

ROGERS MILLS WHITE

Waverly, Va.

Let us introduce you to Roger Mills White, a man who has been with us only one year. White was born in Waverly, Va., on October 6, 1895. He went to the Waverly High School and afterwards to Elon College. At Elon, White soon became noted as an orator and debater, and since entering W. & L. has kept up his good record and is recognized as one of the best public speakers in college. Although not known by many men, yet those who do know him can testify that he is a fine fellow and that we will always be glad that he came to W. & L. Law is the field to which he has chosen to devote his talents, and with his pleasing personality and fine preparation we feel confident of his success.

THOMAS PRESTON WHITE

Δ T Δ; C C

Lexington, Va.

Another illustrious alumnus of the Lexington High School and one of the very few "home town" boys to have the honor of presiding over the Freshman Class. After an interspersatory career at Washington and Lee "Pres" takes his B.A. degree in June. At one time White gave up the coveted sheepskin and entered the realms of a promising business career as a manufacturer of powder at Hopewell. On becoming less sure of his sway he chucked the powder sinicure in the midst of international war and came home to more effectively and pleasureably protect his own interests—if needs be to wage an aggressive warfare on one and a defensive war on all interlopers. According to all signs Preston will most admirably perpetuate the work started by his father.

GEORGE RAYMOND WOMELDORF

Lexington, Va.

"Womely" first saw the light of the sun—let us use Railroad Ruff's expression—"in the very shadow of old House Mountain." All this occurred September 4, 1894. How so fine a farm product grew from the limestone soil of Rockbridge is more than we can understand. Even Phutphut's botany sharks can not explain it. George took his preparatory work at the famous Lexington High School, where his fine progress convinced his father that Womely was cut out for something more conspicuous than the tilling of the soil. Hence, in the fall of 1913, he entered W. & L. For four years his cheery smile has been an inspiration to all. George has religious inclinations, and expects to preach the gospel to the House Mountaineers. While in college, he has been a faithful member of the Graham Lee Literary Society, the Y. M. C. A. and Student Volunteers. Chief Marshal of the Graham Lee Celebration, '17; President, Third Term.

IN September, 1913, when the bell in the old belfry of Washington building pealed out notes assembling the students, both old and new, of Washington and Lee in the Chapel for the formal opening of the 1913-'14 scholastic year, it marked the period of a new regime and a new administration.

Among the men of that body were a number that were to become leaders in scholastic work and in affairs of the campus while in school and who will doubtless become leaders in the business and commercial world.

In the department of Engineering there were fifty men to matriculate but many have changed to Law or Academic work. Men who were more inclined to literary rather than technical training have made these changes, but the men who have remained have by this time become quite proficient in the different branches of engineering; chemical, civil, and electrical, and we feel justly proud of the remaining few.

Since our entrance in 1913, the men of the Science School have had an important part in the affairs of the campus; in athletics, literary society work, and various other college activities.

We have made a good showing while in college and it is to be assured that our Alma Mater will be proud to claim us after we have left her.

EDMOND F. FISHER

Φ Κ Ψ

Summit, N. J.

One-half of the Engineering Class greets you. Edmond was born in the latter part of the 19th century in Pittsfield, Mass. He prepared for college at Blair Academy, Blairstown, N. J., and set out for Washington and Lee in the fall of 1913. "Fish" is one of the few who have succeeded to travel through all of the courses of "System," or other words what is known on the campus as "Sissy's mental athletics." His reward will be a Bachelor of Science degree in Civil Engineering.

"Fish" has been very popular since his arrival in Lexington and while here has made many friends. He is a member of the Phi Kappa Psi fraternity; the S. P. I. S.; and is Executive Committeeman of the Senior Scientific Class.

"Fish" expects to enter the Marine Corps service and in the near future we will be reading of the doings of Admiral Fisher.

JAMES H. FORBES

A X P

Alton, Ill.

We have before us and in our midst in this 20th century a regular Sir Isaac Newton, in all likeness and ability in the person of one James H. Forbes, of Alton, Ill. Jimmie attended Alton High School and in 1913 entered this institution of many heroes and traditions, and immediately started to show the boys something. Several times he has been awarded a position on the Intellectual Gridiron. He captured the Physics Scholarship in '15-'16, and at present is taking all of the Engineering courses so that he can get a Bachelor of Science degree in Chemistry. A funny thing is that Jimmie made all A's this year, too.

He is a member of the Chemical Society and the Y. M. C. A. He is also President of the Senior Science Class. Jimmie entertains hopes of becoming a "king of finance." Here's luck to him.

HAROLD TERRIS HAGAN
Atlanta, Ga.

Harold T. Hagan is a natural born Southern product coming from the "Metropolis of the South." On January 5, 1896, "H. T." was introduced into this good old world. In his younger days, when he was preparing for college, Hagan took a course at Tech. High School, Atlanta, thus laying the solid foundation for his scientific career. After having been loyal to his own state and attending Georgia Tech. for one year he entered Washington and Lee in 1914, and will get his Bachelor of Science degree from here in June.

Hagan expects to enter the firm of Hagan & Dodd Co., in Atlanta, and become a syrup manufacturer. He says that many things contain sweet things beside sugar cane and with the great knowledge of chemistry that he has he is going to show the boys a few things.

EDWARD LEE HIX
Lynchburg, Va.

Here is another product of the "Hill City" and a "velly goot" one, too. "Hickie" says that the Lynchburg High School claims him as one of their finished products. He entered Washington and Lee in 1914 and immediately started his tasks in the test tube brigade, and has been doing research work ever since, if it is not in the line of atoms or molecules it is trying to find out the balmy fluid that Cupid tips his darts with. He has taken up a difficult subject but we are sure that he will carry it through if what he says is true, because he leads one to believe that he is quite a lady charmer.

Hickie is one of those three-year men, getting his Bachelor of Science degree this year.

Hickie has been quite active on the campus and has held the following offices: President of the Chemical Society; Vice-President, Lynchburg Club; Treasurer of the Senior Scientific Class; Manager of Senior Basket Ball; Sophomore Assistant in Baseball; and on the Sophomore Squad.

PAUL DEVER PICKENS
Φ K Ψ; Π A N
Philippi, W. Va.

Here we have the roamer of the class. "Pick" was born in Philippi, W. Va., on September 13, 1893, but since that time has resided in nearly every state on the Atlantic seaboard. He attended the Lexington High School; Arms Academy; and Mr. Hermon Boys' School, Mass., before entering Washington and Lee in 1913. Since that time he has been striving for a Bachelor of Science degree which he will receive in June. "Pick" is very quiet and demure but is a "hale fellow, well met." He has served his class well in the following offices: Treasurer of the Sophomore Class, and Vice-President of the Senior Science Class. He is also a member of the Phi Kappa Psi fraternity, and the Pi Alpha Nu ribbon society, also the S. P. I. S. Pick is undecided what he is going to do but he has slight inclinations of becoming a missionary.

MARION SUTTON SANDERS
Φ T Δ; Π A N; C C
Wytheville, Virginia

The philosophers of old have said that a sunbeam couldn't be hidden forever and we find that their sayings are only too true, for we have an example of such in our midst in the person of Marion (Red) S. Sanders, of Wytheville, Va. "Red" claims June 23, 1896, as the time of his birth and Roanoke, Va., as the place. He attended public school and Berwick School in Wytheville, and in the fall of 1913 he entered upon his arduous duties at W. & L. As the result of his labors he will be awarded a Bachelor of Science degree. "Red" has been very popular on the campus and with the "Belles of Lexington," and is also very popular with the visitors that happen in for the "Hops." Marion is a member of the Φ T Δ and Π A N fraternities; the Cotillion Club; Southwest Virginia Club, and is Secretary of the Senior Science Class. "Red" expects to become an Electrical Engineer, and his ambitions will doubtless be fulfilled for when the lad gets angry he surely "makes the sparks fly."

DAVID WALTERS THORNBURG
Martinsburg, W. Va.

"Ikey" was born on March 26, 1895, in the city of Martinsburg, W. Va., and entered Washington and Lee in 1913. He has always been of a scientific turn of mind, and so chose a Bachelor of Science, in Engineering, for the goal of his ambition.

His list of achievements are indeed voluminous, and in every field of campus activity will be found his college triumphs, showing that in David Thornburg, Washington and Lee has a well rounded man.

Some of his achievements are as follows: Sophomore Assistant Football, '14-'15; Assistant Business Manager, Southern Collegian, '14-'15; All-Class Basket Ball Team, '14-'15; Albert Sidney, 2nd crew, '14-'15; All-Class Football Team, '16-'17; Vice-President, Junior Class; Albert Sidney Varsity, '15-'16; Business Manager, Southern Collegian, '15-'16; Captain, Junior Basket Ball Team; Engineering Scholarship, '14-'15; Vice-President of West Virginia Club, '16-'17; Historian, Senior Science Class; Executive Committee, Final Ball, '15-'16, '16-'17; Member, Graham-Lee Literary Society; Vice-President of Albert Sidney Boat Club.

"Fish" is a sure enough student but unlike so many students, he has always been found with some other line of college activities. If we were to enumerate the various things that Fish has been mixed up in, he would take the lead over all the rest of the Senior Class. The numerous calices of the vicinity and elsewhere have lost many hours of sleep wondering if he could have meant those sweet nothings that he has whispered into so many pink ears. Born in North Carolina, November 1, 1895, he migrated north and stopped at Lynchburg, Va., long enough to finish the High School course, and in the fall of 1913 he began his career here. In three years he carried away a B.A. degree and this year he gets his M.A. Albert Sidney Crew in two for 1915, and stroke for 1916; President of the Albert Sidney Boat Club, '15-'16; Ring Tum Phi Staff, '14-'15; Calyx artist for two years, and Editor-in-Chief, '17; Captain of Class Football and Basket Ball; Y. M. C. A. Cabinet, '16-'17; Vice-President of his Class, '15-'16; Young Scholarship, '15; Mapleson Scholarship, '15-'16.

JOHN L. FURNEE
The Netherlands

When you see a high hat with its usual accessories coming and a monocle protruding on the nether side, it is a safe bet that the "Duke" approaches. He took his B.A. degree at the University of the Hague (Holland) in 1907. Feeling some of the same spirit that inspired Columbus he immediately sailed the ocean blue. In September, 1916, "Duke" came to W. & L. to expose himself to the whys and wherefores of the consular service in theory. His geniality has won him many "fast" friends on the campus and in the village. He is gifted with unusual managerial ability as was shown in the recent basket ball emulations, but even the Irish have ceased to pose as the magicians. We prophesy a shining future for him in the consular service.

Class History

WHEN the familiar tones of that stern old monitor of so many generations of Washington and Lee men rang out on the cool morning breezes of the fourteenth of September, nineteen hundred and sixteen, the one hundred and thirty-fifth session of the institution which bears the names of two of America's greatest leaders was begun. This old bell called to the classroom the usual number of new men anxious to solve the mysteries of campus life as well as an adequate number of their elders who are always willing to help them with their problems. Mingled with this mercy crowd one might have noticed grave seniors and hurrying lawyers with their voluminous burdens. The casual observer of this heterogeneous crowd of seekers after knowledge has seen long ago the representatives of the class of nineteen hundred and eighteen. He has, however, refrained from mentioning the fact until now because he wishes to tell the story of these individuals and their class.

When one begins to count the members of the Junior Class he may be surprised at the rather small number which has survived the battle against various hindrances during the last two years. But my friend must remember that while this class was young and numerous it furnished its share of athletes and won its share of honors. But now, since so much of its youthful blood has been lost, extraordinary achievements should not be expected of the Junior Class. One may form a very faint conception of the merits of this class from a careful perusal of the following brief sketch of its members since last September.

The Junior Class is well represented on the staff of the three publications, furnishing managers for two of them. Its members are to be found on both the intellectual and football gridirons where they have won distinction. On the latter were Pierotti, Sorrells and Graham, who held positions on the varsity as well as Ramey, Watts and others among the scrubs. The Juniors again appeared in the limelight when they humbled the husky Seniors in the inter-class football struggle. Because of the inability of the managers to obtain the requisite number of suits at the scheduled time, the game for the championship with the Sophomores was cancelled by mutual agreement. Therefore, while neither class can claim precedence in football, the Juniors were at least scheduled to fight for it.

In basket ball and in social functions the Juniors continue to be prominent. During the past season, on the floor of Doremus Gymnasium, "Merce" and "Al" again won distinction in upholding and increasing the prestige of the White and Blue and indirectly, that of the White and Red, the colors of the Junior Class. The one tarnished spot on the blazing escutcheon of the class is its defeat in basket ball by the Seniors who greatly outweighed the Junior Team and had the advantages of a larger amount of practice and better team work. The silver lining of this cloud is the fact that the team upheld the honor of the class to the best of its ability by bravely fighting a losing battle to its unsatisfactory close. As to their ability as entertainers, the members of the class refer with pleasure to the many fair ones who have attended the college festivities from time to time, including the Prom in February. To prove that it also has some musical talent the Junior Class merely points with pride to Arnold, Rice, Sorrells, Vance and others who have amply shown their ability.

Now, it is not exactly fair to judge the Junior Class entirely by this brief chronicle, for there are necessarily a number of omissions due to limited space or carelessness. Feeling that it has at least contributed its small mite to the honor and glory of Washington and Lee, and hoping to do more for her in the future, the Junior Class is most sincere in its wish that she may grow and prosper continuing to lead hundreds of future generations in the paths of knowledge and upright manhood as she has most faithfully led the Class of Nineteen Hundred and Eighteen.

Class History

LANGUAGE sharks tell us that sophos plus mores equals sophomores; but it happens that in Greek sophos means wise and mores means fools. We do not mind the first, but we cannot endure the last half of our derivation. Does it look like we are a bunch of mores when forty per cent of the intellectual gridironists were sophomores? From the first time that the individual members of this class backed into Lexington two years ago, we have let the University know that we were up and doing. If by chance you should ask for proofs of this statement let me ask you a few questions. Do you know who won the push-ball fight in 1915 and again in 1916? Who was it that won the inter-class football in 1915 and in 1916? Who was it that won the interclass basket ball in 1916? Who first started a class memorial fund at W. & L.? Who first used the Doremus Gymnasium for gym classes? Who saw to it that this year's Freshmen should continue to entertain the town with their musical voices? Say, it was the Sophomores, the class of 1919, to whom everyone looks when recruits are needed for any branch of college activity. We are and always have been willing to do our share whether it be work or play, for such is the spirit of Washington and Lee.

Peale, Powell, and Johnson backed up the cross-country team. Cromwell, Gladney, and Henke have shown themselves worthy of our class in track; while Cromwell, Fain, Moore, Till and Mears represented us on the football field. Wilson was on the inter-collegiate debating team. McMurray holds the record of never getting below an A on a term grade. Blocker has ably led the class in all its activities and, owing to that leadership and the faithful work of the Treasurer, the Sophomore Cotillion was a decided success. Other members have shown themselves to be faithful workers, but space prevents too detailed an enumeration of their activities and honors.

Our class is not as large as last year because so many of our number have been forced to stop school or have taken up Law. We regret that their names do not appear on our class roll. We have guided this year's Freshmen in the paths of righteousness, and we have endeavored to instill in them the sense of the responsibilities which they assume upon matriculating at Washington and Lee.

We clearly appreciate the strain placed upon the consciences of some historians in the fulfillment of their duties, but we wish to commend the individual members of the 1919 class for the many activities in which they have succeeded and for the wealth of material furnished our historian. Although we neither deserve nor claim all the honors connected with college life we consider ourselves justified in claiming a goodly portion for the class of 1919.

History of the Class of '20

WE look back over a space of only a few months to the date on which the class of '20 entered the campus of Washington and Lee. A noble crowd they appeared from the first, but little was it thought that they would compose the powerful class that is now to be remembered as the class of '20. The class began its successful and notable career by organization. Those men were made officers who were thought to possess the greatest amount of ability as class leaders and workers, and their faithful service has revealed the wise insight of the class. In all meetings, the class has manifested an ardent class spirit and a remarkable power to perform as a unit. The class has shown that its interests are for the greater prosperity of the university, and that their desire and purpose has been to promote these interests.

But this is looking at the class from its own point of view. A better test of the freshman class is from the sophomore point of view. Of course we did not ask the sophomores what they thought of us; even freshmen know better than that. We got our information by a method of deduction—we know all about this too. Our deduction was something like this—those sophomores either forgot to beat us or they did not have any excuse for such action. It is far more probable that a sophomore would forget his primary duty. Thus the conclusion is—the freshmen were too good to be beaten. It is lucky for the vigilance committee that such classes appear only once in a lifetime. Another class like the class of '20 would certainly cause bankruptcy of the vigilance committee and necessitate their withdrawal from business. But to say that the sophomores entirely neglected us would be a hyperbolical expression for such warm hospitality as we received occasionally. Our honorable superiors deemed it their supreme duty at certain appointed times to test for speed certain of our number. But these days of compulsory speed are now over, and we now stand "Monarchs of the Paddle" waiting to escort our successors along the road we have just travelled with such success.

In the Annual Push-Ball Fight, the class of '20 met probably the strongest team that has ever entered such a contest. But little were our spirits daunted by their past greatness or by their seeming strength. Owing to our remarkable skill and effective energy, these giants were only able to beat us by a score of seven to nothing (7-0). In basket ball and also in the heavy gymnasium contest, the sophomores were victors, but the freshmen won the swimming meet by a large margin.

In this brief history, no attempt is made to mention the names of the freshmen who have distinguished themselves in all of the various college activities—such a list would be too long. In every branch of athletics, with the exception of the crew, at least one member of the class of '20 has been honored with a monogram, and in three events the records are held by freshmen. But in all our prosperity, we have not failed to gain what is most important of all—the true spirit of Washington and Lee. We have learned to honor her sacred traditions, and uphold her lofty ideals. These the class of '20 will ever remember and revere.

Washington and Lee All Hail

Washington, the uncorrupt,
Our Columbia's pride,
When Virginia offered gold,
Waived the gift aside;
Nourish learning with your gold,
Learning scarce begun.
So they built a college fair,
Called it Washington.

CHORUS

Manhood made thee,
Honor stayed thee,
By the truth thou shalt prevail,
Bowered in beauty, built on duty,
Washington and Lee, all hail.

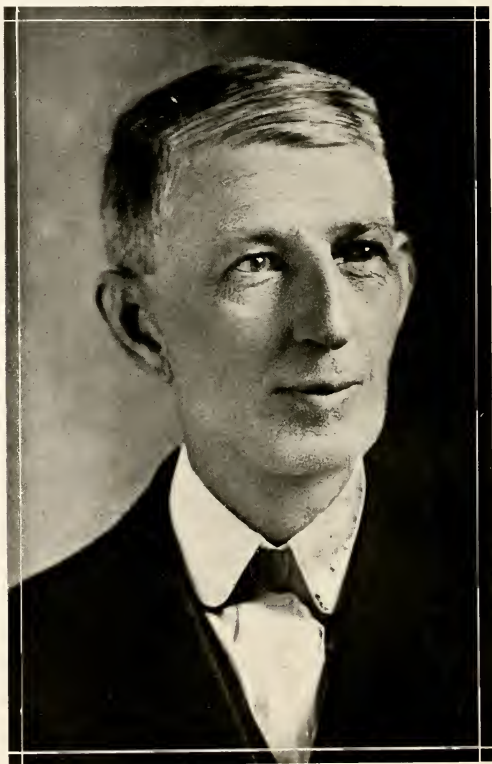

Lee, the undefeated Lee,
Washington's true heir,
Found our Alma Mater lorn,
Scholarless and bare,
Curtius like, he gave himself,
Purer could not be,—
From that flame to being came
Washington and Lee.

CHORUS

Climbing up to meet the blue,
Stands our trophied school,
Honor is its heritage,
Chivalry, its rule.
We are bought by nobleness,
Brothers let us be
Worthy of the glorious twain,—
Washington and Lee.

CHORUS

Martin Parks Burks

AN APPRECIATION

By One Who Knew Him Intimately While a Student Under Him

AT the mention of the name of "Daddy Burks" there wells up a flood of affection and respect, nay, almost reverence, in the hearts of those who have been so fortunate as to sit at the feet of this "Gamaliel of the Law."

Himself learned in the law, and devoted to its study, Mr. Burks was always forebearing and patient with his students, as we struggled and wrestled with propositions which were to him so simple. Never did we see him out of temper or irascible, though we often failed to grasp either the reason of the law, which he was trying to explain, or its application which he was trying to demonstrate, but with wonderful patience, he would persevere and explain until the sun of comprehension broke through to our befogged intelligences.

In class it would rarely do, when the law under discussion was founded upon deep principles or forceful reason, to answer his inquiry by merely stating the law. There would always come back the inevitable "Why", and but little credit did we get unless we could tell the reason. In pleading, it would rarely suffice to answer by stating what steps should be taken in a given case, for always back came the inquisitorial "How?". He was searching and insistent in his questions in class, and as far as possible made each student work out his own salvation, but when we had floundered into regions too deep for our own efforts, he was ever ready to lend a helping hand, and rare indeed was the case in which he could not state the proposition or illustrate it so that it would be clear.

He was zealous and untiring in his study of the law, and made it the "only child" of his profession. As a teacher he was a master, and had, to a remarkable degree, the facility for so stating important propositions as to engrain them on the memory. Often his old students, after many years at the Bar, find in the midst of a Court trial, when questions of pleading or evidence are sprung, which must be dealt with without opportunity to investigate, that there flashes through the mind some striking method of statement, or some forceful illustration, oftentimes homely in itself, yet never to be forgotten—and the law comes back. We say, "The Law Comes Back" advisedly, for with his ex-students, what Mr. Burks has said, is the final word, and it is indeed rare that a Virginia Court will not accept it as conclusive.

There comes to my mind, in this connection, a remark once made to me by my partner, when I was arguing some question, and quoting "Mr. Burks" as authority. He said: "Of course you need no further authority. You recognize authority on what is the law in Virginia in the following order: First, Martin Burks; second, the Virginia Court of Appeals; and third, the Supreme Court of the United States." He was right, and that is as it should be, and is with his former pupils.

Outside of class Mr. Burks never failed to give unsparingly of his time and effort to assist us, not only in reference to our studies, but also as to any personal difficulties or troubles of any sort. His students all knew that if they had troubles, or wanted advice, they would always find a sympathetic listener and wise counsellor in Mr. Burks. It is remarkable that never, during my stay at Washington and Lee (five years), nor since that time, have I ever heard a complaint or unfavorable criticism of Mr. Burks by any of his students, or ex-students. To those who are familiar with students and their tendency, oft-times thoughtlessly, to complain or criticise, through force of habit, or on general principles, this statement may appear almost unbelievable, yet it is true to the letter. We all admired him, and loved him to such an extent that not only would we under no circumstances say anything to his detriment ourselves, but we always labored to have our opinions and admiration extend to all the college students, whether in the law school or not and thus as was inevitable, he was looked up to by the students of every school in the University, as well as ourselves, as a model and beloved teacher.

The writer does not feel that he is properly qualified to do justice in words to a proper "Appreciation of Martin Parks Burks," yet is he unwilling to let pass any opportunity to let the outside world know how much and why the students at Washington and Lee respected and revered him, who fully deserves credit for all that is implied in the name by which he is affectionately known—"Daddy."

Mr. Burks has left Washington and Lee for the higher call of the Supreme Court of the state. The state is to be sincerely congratulated on his appointment to this high office, and we glory in his wider sphere of influence and usefulness, yet our joy in his advancement is mixed with real sorrow and deep regret, for our Alma Mater is to lose him. His value to the University, and more particularly to the law school, can hardly be overstated. We, who were students under him, congratulate ourselves that we have had this opportunity and privilege. Wherever he may go, whatever may be his sphere of work, our affection, good wishes and deep respect will always follow him. We wish him God Speed, and will ever cherish as a blessing the memory of the hours spent with and under him.

A learned and painstaking lawyer; a patient and efficient teacher; a ready and wise counsellor; a sympathetic and loving friend; such is "Daddy" Burks.

The Dean is gone! Long Live the Judge! God Bless the Man!

—J. R. C.

The Washington and Lee Provisional Battalion

THE Calyx, as it goes to press, finds the Washington and Lee Provisional Battalion well organized and its training begun. Filled with the strong spirit of the two great generals whose names this University is proud to bear, the students have come forward as one to do their part in the preparedness program set forth by the National Government consequent to the Declaration of War against Germany. Over ninety-five per cent of the students physically able to serve have joined the battalion. The attendance at drill has averaged over ninety-nine per cent, giving eloquent proof of the interest and enthusiasm, with which Washington and Lee men have answered the call of the President.

On April the third, the morning after Woodrow Wilson's glorious address, the students gathered in University Assembly to help decide the steps the institution would take in the national crisis. President Henry Louis Smith made a stirring address, which, though spirited, was at the same time wise and balanced. Questions were then put to the student body concerning their desires, qualifications and previous training. The vote was unanimous for military training, while for a regular two-year Reserve Officers' Training Corps course almost all of the under classmen held in the affirmative. Following the assembly, application was made by telegraph for the establishment under the United States officers a unit of the R. O. T. C., but owing to the great demand for officers in the active government ranks, it was found impossible to secure an adequate training force at the time. In the emergency, however, the authorities of the Virginia Military Institute offered the services of Major Murray F. Edwards as Tactical Officer and Commandant, and those of the graduating class as drill masters until such times as the students should have sufficient training to officer themselves.

Realizing our good fortune in having so splendid an officer and such efficient drill masters to instruct us, on April the tenth, we unanimously accepted the generous offer, and following a talk by Major Edwards to the battalion that afternoon, on April the eleventh the first real organization and drill took place. Since that time the work has been carried on with the greatest dispatch and thoroughness. Faculty and student body military committees have been appointed, and corporals selected from the students. Blanks have been issued calling for a complete enumeration of the qualifications of the various men to serve the nation in the capacities for which they were best fitted. Such blanks have also been issued to all of the alumni.

In addition, an ambulance corps of fifty men has been organized under the direction of Dr. J. W. H. Pollard and is being drilled thoroughly in the School of the Soldier. Regular classroom instruction will be given to this corps by Dr. Pollard and Professor Forest Fletcher.

The student corporals meet twice weekly for theoretical military instruction under Major Millner, Commandant at V. M. I., besides going on long field practice hikes with the Institute Corps.

Thus have Washington and Lee and Virginia Military Institute men met the call of the national government by a rare example of practical patriotism, and judging from present appearances, Major Edwards' prediction that the battalion will by June be worthy in both spirit and ability of this great university is certain of full realization. Never before have trustees, faculty, and Student Body united with such determined enthusiasm for the attainment to so great and large an end.

Recent Progress of Washington and Lee

NOR an American institution of learning in this marvelous age of social and educational reconstruction to be standing still is to be already dead. No institution, not even Washington and Lee, can rely upon its past glories or be satisfied with its past achievements. The Calyx, therefore, as a faithful mirror of university life, gives below a brief summary of the more recent items of change and progress which mark the rapid expansion of the old University to meet the needs and answer the call of the twentieth century. For convenience, these will be grouped under separate heads.

1. Administrative. The administrative offices have been enlarged and equipped with all necessary modern apparatus, dictaphones, multigraph, new typewriters, loose-leaf books of every kind, card catalogues, and many additional college records and blanks. Instead of having a busy professor give a small part of his time to the duties of Registrar, a full-time Registrar, with well-equipped office, has been installed, and the records and statistics of the University, in fullness and detail, now compare favorably with those of any institution in the country. Two stenographers' offices have also been built and equipped. The Dean of the University has been released from most of his professorial duties, and the supervisory work of the office largely increased in proportion.

2. Growth in the Teaching Force. During the past two or three years the following new chairs have been established and their occupants added to the Faculty. A professorship of Mining Geology, the professor-elect to begin his duties next year, and six additional associate-professorships, namely, in English, Economics, Physical Education, Commercial Law, Physics, and Chemistry. This is an increase of about 33 1/3% to the teaching members of the Faculty while the student body has, in the same time, increased but 6%.

3. Entrance Requirements, etc. The entrance requirements for admission to the Freshman Class have been strictly interpreted and rigidly enforced. They were last year raised to 15 units, with a minimum of 13 for conditioned entrance. As a matter of fact, however, the great majority of students, for several years, have presented more than 14. In its entrance requirements the University now stands among the few leading institutions in the United States.

4. Care of Sick Students. In order that students may be properly cared for during illness, even when without financial resources to meet the necessary expenses, a plan of co-operation has been adopted between the University and the Stonewall Jackson Memorial Hospital. The University collects $2 from each student each year and for this sum the hospital furnishes board, room, and general nursing free of charge to every sick student however long his illness may continue. It is hoped soon to complete arrangements to furnish to every student the services of a capable physician for a similar fee.

5. Establishment of a Department of Physical Education and Training. With the completion of the new gymnasium there was inaugurated a complete system of medical and physical inspection, education, and training, indoor and outdoor. The equipment for this department is exceptionally complete. The course is universal and compulsory for two years and optional for two more. The department is in charge of two professors giving their full time to the work, with a corps of part-time instructors, and marks the beginning of a new era in the health and efficiency of the student body. All outdoor and intercollegiate athletics are under the care and supervision of this department and all coaches are members of its teaching staff and under its control.

6. Equipment. During the last few years a large and commodious field clubhouse has been built, the Doremus Memorial Gymnasium (the largest and most complete in the South) has been constructed, the campus in its neighborhood graded and set in grass, cement and macadam roadways built, the capacity of the Library stock-room doubled, the School of Commerce library and reading-room remodeled, the capacity of the University heating plant more than doubled, and a thousand dollars worth of apparatus added to the Physics I laboratory. The local property and grounds of the University have been largely increased by the gift, in return for a small annuity, of the estate of Mrs. Clara D. Estill, consisting of three large residences and 15½ acres of high class residential lots, the whole property lying within five minutes walk of the University buildings.

7. The Law School. During the past two years the regular curriculum of the Law School has been changed from a two-year to a three-year course, the library remodeled and enlarged, and the modern case system of teaching introduced into several of the departments.

8. Intercollegiate Athletics. During the past few years the whole conduct of intercollegiate athletics has been placed more directly under the supervision and control of the Faculty committee, the Graduate Manager, and the Department of Physical Training. This is especially true in the supervision and control of all contracts, purchases, and expenditures. As a result, the finances of the Association have been in a healthy state, all debts have been paid, and annual deficits abolished.

Meanwhile the success of Washington and Lee in all departments of intercollegiate athletics has been phenomenal. Never in the history of the University have its various teams attracted such national attention or won such conspicuous standing.

During the same period the eligibility requirements have been much increased and strictly enforced. The Faculty regulations as to the scholarship of athletes have barred all ringers and loafers from the teams, and beginning next year the University adopts the One-Year Rule barring all first-year men from a place on any Varsity team.

9. Intercollegiate Debating. During the past few years this department of activity has been placed on a much firmer basis. A regular chapter of the Delta Sigma Rho has been established, a regular instructor employed, and an increasing interest shown by the student body in the intercollegiate contests.

10. The Omicron Delta Kappa. During the past two years a national fraternity has been organized similar to the Phi Beta Kappa but of much broader scope and function. This is an organization of the chosen leaders in all the various departments of the University, athletic, social, literary, religious, and scholastic. The function of the society is to co-ordinate and unify all campus leadership for the advancement and betterment of campus life and the interests of the University.

11. College Publications. The last few years have seen the college weekly, The Ring Tum Phi, extend its influence and double its circulation till now more copies are sent outside of Lexington than to subscribers within the town. The former publication of a Summer Bulletin and an annual catalogue by the University has been extended into a regular bulletin published every two months. The University now publishes annually formal bulletins of the School of Commerce, the School of Law, the Physical Training Department, and the annual general catalogue; also alumni bulletins, bulletins of general information, the Summer Bulletin, and various circulars, etc., the whole amounting to about 25,000 pamphlets per annum. It is hoped within the near future to add a regular quarterly alumni bulletin to the regular publications of the institution.

12. Financial Resources. The financial resources of the University have been increased within the past few years (1) by the Doremus legacy of nearly $2,000,000, which will revert to Washington and Lee on the death of the widow, (2) by the building and equipment of the gymnasium, largely financed by Mrs. Doremus out of her own personal funds, amounting to about $100,000, (3) by the receipt of a legacy of $100,000 from the Doremus Estate on the death of Mr. Doremus' father, and (4) by the founding of the Sarah E. White and the Henry W. Anderson Loan Funds.

13. Recognition and Advancement of Scholarship on the Campus. Many modern and effective methods have been added to make scholarship still more popular and universal on the campus of Washington and Lee. At the close of each term the average standing of every student in the University is now made out an honor list is published in the college paper and sent to all the home newspapers of those who have won a place thereon. This honor list for the year is now read at commencement and published in the catalogue.

A select list of first-class high schools all over the South, numbering about 700, are asked to send the University the names of their three leading Seniors and special efforts are made to matriculate as many as possible of these star high school men.

A large loose-leaf ledger has been prepared, in which a page is given to every college organization, fraternal, religious, social, athletic, etc. The exact average scholastic standing of every organization is calculated at the close of each session and this is published in the college papers.

The fraternities have recently adopted rules barring from initiation those whose scholarship is notably defective.

The Faculty have scholarship rules for the eligibility of the members of the Varsity teams. These are strictly enforced and have done much to increase the average scholarship of the athletes of the University.

The old automatic rule has been made more severe than formerly and makes it impossible for a persistent loafer to remain a student of the University.

A record is kept of the average standing of the representatives of all the various high schools patronizing the University, and every high school putting one of its representatives on the honor list is immediately notified of the fact.

The above are some of the newer methods of advancing the cause of scholarship at the University. The former prizes in every department, the endowed scholarships, etc., are still in force as of old.

14. Organization of Faculty, Students, and Alumni for the Advancement of the University. During the past 18 months a new era has been inaugurated, it is hoped, by the organization of all those connected with the University for the improvement, expansion, and advancement of the institution.

The whole Faculty has been organized into a deliberate body so that the experience, skill, and effective methods of the most expert in any department may become the common property of all. A complete program is made out and published in advance for each term with the subjects assigned and the speakers selected. At each meeting of the Faculty three professors discuss the various problems connected with the work of the institution, each member taking his turn in regular rotation. Questions of student self-government, the honor system, the best methods of supervising and assimilating new students, best methods of class-room and laboratory instruction, student recreation, athletics, social problems, etc., are thus regularly discussed and the Faculty organized for the betterment of the work of the institution.

The students have also been organized into the "U. B. Club" for the purpose of bettering student conditions, improving the work of the institution, and enlisting the hearty co-operation of every student in the work of the Faculty and the Board of Trustees. Each student member selects those special fields of endeavor which most appeal to him. There are 443 active members of the club and the organization promises great things for the future of the University.

But perhaps the newest and most important is the recent development of the interest of our widely scattered alumni. The old General Alumni Association and the recent and valuable work of the University Alumni, Incorporated, have been gathered up and set forward in a great co-operative movement in which, for the first time, the Trustees and the alumni are working together in perfect harmony and with a common and contagious zeal. A traveling Alumni Secretary has been employed, meetings of the Alumni are being held all over the South, and everywhere a new interest is felt in the University. Several hundred alumni have already joined the organization, promising an annual contribution to the financial resources of their Alma Mater. The last reunion of the alumni at commencement far surpassed anything in the history of the institution, and the movement seems to be gathering momentum with every passing week.

These are some of the more important changes through which the old University is keeping herself young and vigorous. That they may be but the beginnings of a new era of rapid expansion and still more fruitful service is the hope and prayer of all who love the institution of Washington and of Lee.

Intercollegiate debating has made remarkable strides at Washington and Lee in the past few years. The interest in such contests has increased noticeably, both among those inclined towards that kind of work, and in the University as a whole. Since the establishment of Delta Sigma Rho, there have been hot contests for places on the team, and many have striven to win the coveted honor. In this year's preliminaries, more than twenty men entered as contestants.

Only one intercollegiate contest was held this year, that with Trinity College of South Carolina. Another debate has been arranged with the University of Georgia, to take place the 28th of April. In the preliminaries, D. A. Falk and F. C. Stipes won places on the latter team. In the Trinity debate, held in Lexington on March 2, Washington and Lee was represented by Gus Ottenheimer, L. B. Cox, and G. P. Wilson, backed by J. L. Early and J. D. Owens, as alternates. The vote of the judges was in favor of Trinity, although the count of two to one showed the decision was close. This was the last of a series of three debates with Trinity, of which Washington and Lee won the first, and Trinity the last two. The subject of the debate was, Resolved: That Congress should pass a law providing for compulsory arbitration of disputes between inter-state railways and their employees (Constitutionality granted). Washington and Lee upheld the affirmative side of the question.

Although the decision was lost, the work of the W. and L. men was excellent, and they should be highly commended. The team was ably coached by Coach C. Edmund Worth, to whom much praise is due.

In the Georgia debate, Falk and Stipes won by unanimous decision.

Next year it is hoped that at least three intercollegiate contests will be held, that there might be given a greater opportunity for forensic development.

Walter B. Elcock

AN APPRECIATION

The closing of the 1916 football season brought to Washington and Lee causes for deep feelings of regret along with the happy knowledge that another hard campaign had been completed and the old White and Blue had maintained her proud position as sponsor for one of the leading football teams in the country. The pall of gloom which cast itself over the Student Body and the Alumni alike was occasioned by the realization that W. and L. was to lose the services of one who had made himself not only a great asset to the prestige of our athletics, but deeper than this, one who, through his magnetic personality, enthusiastic interest in all matters pertaining to the University, and his clean example, had endeared himself to us as a man among men; one whose influence would be long felt by even him who was not slightly acquainted with the man—none other than our own “Jogger” Elcock.

The value of “Jogger’s” association with our athletics can not be measured by mere technical expression. It would take pages to recount his accomplishments as a mentor of our football teams, and we are all well acquainted with his success. He raised Washington and Lee to a place of respect and recognition during his all too short regime. The master hand of the genius and gentlemen was ever apparent when his teams took the field. He taught his men to play hard but cleanly, and never did our opponents have anything but praise and respect for the representation of W. & L. who carried the white and blue banner on the gridiron.

While we men of Washington and Lee admire “Jogger” Elcock for the fame he has been instrumental in bringing to our University, still more do we admire him for his powerful influence for good, and rightly do we mourn his loss. The men who served under him, learned to love and respect him and it was but for him to command and his players would give their all to do.

The urgent pressure of business was the cause of Coach Elcock's retirement, regardless of flattering offers he received from not only Washington and Lee, but also from other leading institutions of the country. The good wishes of every supporter of the white and blue go forth to Elcock that his business career may be filled with the successful efforts that marked his coaching. When "Jogger" made up his mind to do a thing, only a miracle or the impossible could thwart his accomplishing that which he set out to do. He imbued this same spirit into his men, and he had no use for the man who accepted defeat gracefully. Not that Elcock could not take his medicine like a man, but that his motto was: "We want a win, and nothing but a win will suit us."

Elcock knew football from the ground up. Our teams measured up to, and oftentimes surpassed, in technique and finish the style of our big Eastern opponents, where the development of the teams is supposed to be ultra-perfect. He had a sixth sense in conditioning and handling men, and considering the fact that he was forced to assume the role of trainer as well as coach, "Jogger" was something to wonder at.

In closing, let us say that to Coach Elcock, Washington and Lee owes much. He has planted the seed of athletic success, which, if developed as it should be by his successors, will bring an accumulating fame for years to come to this old institution. To "Jogger" the hand of gratitude is extended with heartfelt sincerity by every alumnus and student of Washington and Lee. Would that he could remain with us always to still further expand his wonderful work and influence. We can not but feel that he is a true and valuable son of our Alma Mater, so fully has he lived her ideals. May he be able in the future to return to these beloved halls and may he be able in the coming years to devote at least a few days to working with our teams. His work will be hard to match, the memories of the man will be with us ever and always proudly shall we point to his three years as coach, the record of those years a fitting testimonial to Jogger, the coach and the man.

FOOT BALL

With its five decisive victories, two defeats and two tie games, Washington and Lee ran the gamut of football experiences during the 1916 season and completed its heavy schedule, which was marked by five intersectional games, considered one of the strongest teams in the South.

Possessing what was admitted to be perhaps the strongest tackle-to-tackle line in the country and in which tackles Bob Ignico and "Pike" Johnson were towers of strength because of their effective overtackle charges as well as their able defensive work with Center, Al Pierotti, guards, "Tex" Bryan and Lindsay Moore, Washington and Lee lacked only weight in its backfield to have been a perfectly balanced gridiron machine. With the eleven lacked in weight to gain against its opponents it made up in considerable measure by the use of the forward pass, and the brilliant broken field running of Captain "Cy" Young, who also strengthened the defense of the team by his superb punting, which for the season averaged nearly 60 yards. The defensive and offensive calibre of the eleven was maintained by the ends, Paul Larkin, Mercer Graham and Turner Bethel proving alert and dependable men, the latter especially proving his versatility by successfully filling places in emergencies at guard tackle and end successively. With Captain Young in the backfield, the Generals had line-plungers of more than ordinary ability in Johnny Sorrells and Galla Paxton at full, Herman Crile at full and right half, and Harry Adams at right half. Blaine Kehoe, although playing his first year, by his work promises to become an able successor to Young as a broken field runner.

It was Coach Walter B. Elcock's final season as the mentor of the Generals. Throughout the season he was assisted by "Jiggs" Donahue, and to the two in the development of the new men in the backfield much of the credit for the season's play is due.

Starting the season at home with the overwhelming defeat of Randolph-Macon by the score of 80 to nothing in a game in which every member of the large squad was given an opportunity to participate, the Generals on the following week journeyed to West Point full of confidence as to the outcome of their first invasion of the East. But tired by the journey and outweighed, the Generals succumbed to the terrific charges of Oliphant and Vidal, and, after tying the score in the first half, went down to defeat, thirteen to seven. The following Saturday, October 14, marked another invasion of the East, Coaches Elcock and Donahue taking their men to New Brunswick to attack the heavy eleven coached at Rutgers by Stanford. Although admitted to have outplayed the Jersey men, the Generals were not able to overcome the handicap of a heavy penalty inflicted for side-line coaching by an over-zealous supporter and the game ended a tie, 13 to 13, six of Rutgers' points resulting from the so-called "multiple kick." Roanoke College on October 21, was defeated 33 to nothing on Wilson field, in a game marked by a number of lost opportunities by the Generals to score.

Atlanta was the scene of the following Saturday's struggle between the Generals and the Yellow Jackets of Georgia, 'Tech, the game ending in a seven to seven tie, with all the honors in favor of Washington and Lee until the final quarter, when, refreshed by new men, the Yellow Jackets were halted by time in their march down the field.

The team displayed its best form of the season on November 4, at Annapolis, against the Navy. Although playing on a muddy field which offered every advantage to their heavier opponents, the Generals outplayed the Middies in every department of the game won by the score of ten to nothing, the playing of Ignico, Johnson and Young featuring the offensive work of Washington and Lee.

Bucknell on November 11, proved an easy victim, the Generals winning on Wilson field before the largest crowd that ever saw a football game at Lexington by the score of fifty-five to seven, the visitors scoring on a fumble near the goal posts.

Washington and Jefferson at Richmond on the following Saturday sprung a surprise by developing an unexpectedly strong defense and opening up with a bewildering variety of forward passes, winning from the Generals by the score of ten to six, in one of the cleanest games ever seen in Richmond.

The season was completed on Thanksgiving Day at Raleigh, where the Generals defeated their old rivals, North Carolina A. & M., for the third consecutive time, the game ending twenty-one to nothing, although the playing was marked by a strong resistance from the supposedly weak Aggies.

Resume of Season

TAKING a clean sweep of the season by defeating each of the thirteen teams with which they had scheduled contests, the Generals completed the best basketball year that Washington and Lee ever had, by establishing what is considered a clean-cut claim for both the South Atlantic and Southern basketball championships.

Before the final and what proved to be the best game of the season in which the Generals defeated the strong University of North Carolina quintet by the score of forty to twenty-three, Washington and Lee had vanquished such fives as Lebanon Valley of Pennsylvania, Vanderbilt, University of West Virginia, West Virginia Wesleyan, Trinity College of North Carolina, Roanoke College and University of Tennessee, besides scoring decisive victories over Virginia Christian College of Lynchburg, Hampden-Sidney, Richmond College, Randolph-Macon College, and North Carolina A. and M.

Each of the teams in the first named division except Vanderbilt was considered to be the best in its class, and two of them, Roanoke College and University of Tennessee suffered their first defeats of the season at the hands of the Generals. Roanoke College had not lost a game for two years until it lost to Washington and Lee by the score of 38 to 15.

The Generals scored 409 points during the season to their opponents' 216, and no team except North Carolina scored as many as 20 points on the White and Blue.

The outstanding features of the Generals' playing, was the almost impregnable defense worked up by Coach "Jiggs" Donahue. With five men strung across the center of the floor when the ball was in possession of their enemies, the Generals were able at all times to prevent any team from making a successful rally for a possible victory. This sterling defense was coupled with able goal shooting and brilliant personal playing by every man on the team. "Cy" Young led the team in the number of field goals with 98 baskets to his credit. Nay, who played his first season with the Generals, followed with 86, and Graham came third with 74.

Young, who played his last season as a General, played star basketball at forward throughout the winter. Graham, who will captain the quint next year and Captain Pierotti performed consistently well at center and guard, while guard Adams and forward Nay, both playing their first year, improved so rapidly as the season progressed, that toward its close their efforts tied with that of Young in brilliancy. Engleby, Stuart, Bethel, Rawlings and McCain proved dependable substitutes, and with each of them except Young with which to build the Generals' Machine from for next season, indications are that Washington and Lee will have as strong a team in 1917-1918, as were the champions of 1916-1917.

Resume of Season

Starting what proved to be a short-lived season with a ten to five victory over Amherst College, Washington and Lee this year won two of four games played, scoring an uphill defeat of Lafayette and losing two good games to Lehigh and University of North Carolina, the latter being played at Danville.

Athletics gave way on Wilson field to military training.

Lehigh defeated the Generals, four to nothing in a contest in which pitcher Hurley's work for the visitors was perhaps the best ever seen on Wilson field. For nine innings the Pennsylvania hurler assisted by sensational fielding did not yield the Generals a single hit and fanned eleven men, not a single White and Blue runner reaching second. Against Lafayette in the third game of the season, Washington and Lee came to the front after staying behind for seven innings, with some good breaks and timely hitting, winning the contest four to three. University of North Carolina administered the Generals' second defeat by the score of two to nothing, Washington and Lee being unable to hit in the pinches.

Pitcher Pierotti distinguished himself in the Lafayette game by going in with three men on in the seventh and pitching air-tight ball for the remainder of the game. Against North Carolina, too, his work was excellent; not only keeping his hits scattered, but gaining two for the Generals.

Had the season been continued, it is felt that the Generals would have developed the best nine it has had in several years. With every position except catcher, second and short filled by regulars of last year and good men at these places, Coach Donahue was confident of a successful season.

Of the old men again candidates for the team were Captain Young, Vance and Gregg in the outfield; pitchers Pierotti, Bryan, and Graham; first baseman Bill Bryan, and third baseman Jones. Kehoe at catcher, promised to become in time a worthy successor to Donahue. Waller at short was a good fielder and could hit well. Collins, at second, the third of the new infielders, showed up brilliantly in each of the four games. Larkin, who played in right, fielded well and got the first home-run of the season against Amherst.

Resume of Season 1916-1917

AS with baseball, war played havoc with Washington and Lee's outdoor track schedule, causing a cancellation of every meet and depriving the Generals of the cinder and turf of an opportunity to fulfill Coach Forest Fletcher's prediction that the team of 1917 would be the best Washington and Lee ever had. Coach Fletcher had so much confidence in the powers of the outdoor track team that most of the track appropriation was allotted by the athletic council to that division of the sport.

The outdoormen got only one chance to display their form and speed and that yearly in the fall, when they won the South Atlantic cross country for the second time within three years. The other time the Generals finished second. The meet was held under the auspices of Catholic University at Washington, the hosts finishing second and University of Virginia third. Powell, who was the first Washington and Lee man to cover the six miles, finished in 34: 4; while Peale, McNitt, Child, J. C. Robbins, Blackford, Irwin and Johnston, his team-mates, followed closely behind.

J. C. Robbins was chosen captain of the team for next year.

The Generals fared well also in the indoor contests in which they participated. Although only a few men were taken to the games at Georgetown and George Washington, the showing made by them was considered satisfactory by Fletcher. At Georgetown, in a matched mile relay against Catholic University, the Generals won in good time, Gladney, Kievlan, Robbins and Powell running for Washington and Lee.

Henke showed up well in the indoor dashes throughout the season. Cromwell did well in the hurdles, and in the heavy gym contest in March, established a new Washington and Lee record for the standing high jump, clearing the bar at four feet, ten inches. On the same day, Robbins established a new University record for the half mile, running the distance on the Doremus gym track in 2:15. Child also broke the mile record here, making it in 5:03-2/5; while McNitt set a new time in the two mile with 10; 53-2/5. "Pike" Johnson, putting the shot for the first time in competition, got it 35 feet 10 inches, breaking the former indoor record. Captain Hallman on several occasions vaulted 11 feet 6 inches, maintaining the record he established last year.

Boat Race 1916

IN one of the most decisive races that North River has ever witnessed, the Albert Sidney First Crew defeated the Harry Lees last June. A great crowd was present to witness the annual contest and the island was thronged with enthusiastic rooters, consisting of visiting calics, students, alumni, townspeople and cadets. The scene was made lively also by the waving colors of the rival clubs and the quick music of the Finals Band.

The Harry Lees were the first to go up the river. The blues followed a minute or so later. At the starting line considerable difficulty was experienced by the two coxswains in jockeying into position, both being nervous and eager to get the best position possible. Dr. Reid White, a varsity Albert Sidney of the older days, served as Starter.

With the report of the pistol, the eight oars flashed into the water as one, both crews getting a splendid start. The Blues, using their superior weight to advantage, rushed the first part of the course and by the end of the first minute were leading by almost a boat length. The Harry Lee rowed in clean-cut fashion throughout the race, employing the characteristic quick plunge stroke.

After the first minute the Blue Crew settled down to a more leisurely pace, accelerating their stroke whenever their opponents seemed to be creeping up on them. The lead of a little over a boat length was maintained until opposite the boat house, when De la Haba called for the final spurt. The winners finished rowing evenly and powerfully in their long sweeping stroke. The Harry Lees, wearied by the long fight to overtake their opponents, were unable to hold their own at the close and finished about two and one-half boat lengths behind.

From the spectators point of view, the second race was probably the more interesting of the two. At the start, the Albert Sidneys gained a good lead, but the cracking of their stroke's ore slowed them up considerably. The Red Crew rowed a splendid race, considering the greater weight of their shell, but owing to weariness, slumped at the finish. Up to 100 yards of the finish, the outcome was very doubtful for either crew, but a final strong Blue spurt won the race for that side.

The time of the Varsity Blues was 4:40, one of the best that the course has ever seen. All in all, it was a fit day for a Blue celebration. The result of the race brought the total number of Blue victories up to 17, as against the 20 of the Reds.

CAMPUS SCANDAL

To those Unfortunates—of whom, let us thank Fortune, there are but few on our Campus—who seem to have been born with a green Persimmon in their mouths, who see the world thru blue or nut-brown spectacles, whose faces are never known to have been wreathed in a Human Smile—this pseudo-humorous section of The Calyx 1917 is sympathetically dedicated.

The Rubaiyat of Omar Stude

Ah, make the most of what we get to spend
Before we from here our footsteps wend;
Dust, get dust, always get the dust, for Sans dough, sans dopes, sans smokes, then—sans friend.

Into this University Why not knowing;
But Whence, the cut of our clothes showing;
And out of it as an arrow from a bow
To a teacher's job! Should we be crowing?

And lately into the classroom full,
Came the Prof, looking most masterful,
Having much to speak of; and
He bid me list to it; and 'twas the Bull!

The Bull that can with words strange
The mind of many a freshman disarrange;
The Sovereign Soporific that at once can
Wakefulness into Slumber change.

The Moving hand deals, and having dealt
Moves on; nor all your anxiety heartfelt
Shall lure it from its task of deal
Nor all your squeezing change a hand that's dealt.

Oh, threats of flunk and Hopes of a D grade!
One thing is certain—This game's been played;
One thing is certain, the rest may fade:
Pleasant memories can never be mislaid.

And much as Play has from me shorn,
And robbed me of my degree this morn;
I often wonder what the Professors love
One half so lovable as the thing they scorn.

Loss

Dinner had been served on the houseboat and the various Shades had repaired to the billiard and smoking rooms. When the cigars were lighted, the first contemplative puffs were followed by a lull in the conversations. The stillness was broken only by the clicking of the ivory balls in the billiard room where Cotton Mather and Oliver Cromwell were playing their nightly contest for the Overseas Billiard Championship.

Henry the Eighth moved uneasily in the recesses of his big rocker. If things didn't liven up soon, he thought rather peevishly, he would go home and take Anne to the movies. Beau Brummel, looking very bored, glanced furtively into a mirror and adjusted his cravat. James Boswell looked with imploring eyes at the big man at whose feet he was sitting, but the Learned Doctor for once was lost in taciturnity. Even Baron Munchausen was silent.

Suddenly, the company raised their heads. Through the open window floated the inspiring notes of a song:

"When Washington and Lee's men fall in line,
We're going to win again another time—"

The music was interrupted by the scraping of oars as Charon thumped the boat against the ladder leading to the deck.

The Shades in the silent smoking room looked at each other delightedly.

Someone jumped lightly to the deck outside and the song was continued.

—"And we'll roll Vir-gin-ia on the sod,

Rah, Rah, Rah."

Framed in the doorway, his face wreathed in smiles and his que awry, stood George Washington, good old George!

A yell went up from the assemblage in the smoking room.

"Hi, there, Georgie, old top," piped his devout old admirer, Alexander the Great, "What's the little old god-father of Wash and Lee so happy over this evening?"

"Where's old Tom Jefferson?" countered Washington, in high spirits.

"Dunno, he was around here a minute ago," answered a chorus of voices. "What's up? We're starving for some excitement. Has the University of Virginia been licked again? Tell us."

"Let's find Tom; I want to hear what he has to say first," answered Washington, and the search for Jefferson was begun.

They found him in the buffet orating to a group of sympathetic listeners.

"As I was saying," he shouted, "all men were created free and—," but the rest of his speech was cut short.

"Have you seen the paper?" demanded Washington, waving the home edition of the Styx Sentinel in Jefferson's face.

"Yes, ain't it awful?" Jefferson almost wept.

The crowd gathered closer, feeling sorry now that they had not stayed at home for supper and got a copy of the paper for themselves.

"Awful?" intoned Washington. "Why, I think it's the greatest thing that ever happened to strengthen Washington and Lee and the University of Virginia."

"And I think that it's the worst thing that ever happened," retorted Jefferson, almost in tears.

"Why, Tom, I'm surprised! and a pained look shown in Washington's eyes. "Only yesterday you were telling me that you thought it would be fine for the University and Washington and Lee, and today, when it is announced that athletic relations will be resumed, you—"

His voice broke and he hung his head in sorrow.

"Athletic relations resumed?" cried Jefferson. "I'm not talking of athletic relations. I'm talking"—his voice shook—"I'm talking of the State going dry."

"Oh!" exclaimed the crowd, thinking of the University, "What a pity!"

"Yes, it is," sobbed Jefferson and his body rocked with emotion.

"Cheer up, Tom," consoled Washington, patting his comrade and rival on the back, "cheer up. The University will survive. Just think of the good that will result from our colleges meeting again on the athletic field."

"Taint no use. Taint no use to play," sobbed the founder of U. Va. "'Cause if the State's dry, the boys can't celebrate no victories and can't drown no defeats. Imagine this happening at My University!"

The Shades retired and left Jefferson alone in the buffet composing a new Declaration of Independence—this time against the tyranny of the Virginia Legislature. —ISAAC SHUMAN.

Sissy Stevens

We regret that we must present such a snapshot as the above but the Press must ever go hand-in-hand with Truth, telling things as they are and not as we would have them. Besides, it was not our fault that Sissy went into the squirrel-raising industry. Nor can these peaceful little quadrupeds be blamed for craving what to them must be as choice a morsel of food as an ice-cream cone to a student on a hot spring day. An all-wise Providence ordained that squirrels should live on nuts, and one of these fine days in spite of every law of applied motion that Sissy knows, they're going to catch the Czar of Reid Hall, and once and for all Test Problems and Unsystematic System shall fade from the face of the Earth. Is it too much to hope?

But we are not going to say that Sissy is without his good traits. Besides, once having chinned the bar "twenty consecutive times as a student at the University of Virginia," the Doctor and his faithful tuning fork are always in evidence at the Interscholastic Track Meet. Therefore, we must do him justice and place him along the side of Camp, Thorpe, Hans Wagner and the other gleaming athletic lights. One of these days, the Athletic Council is going to wake up and give Sissy a monogram—modified, of course, by a stop watch and chinning-bar running across it. Honor to them to whom honor is due!

Le Duc Furnee

Speaking of royalty, cast your uncultured peepers over the profile of the unadulterated, bona fide, honest-to-goodness wartime model from the land of wind-mills and wooden shoes, as portrayed below. Yes, this is Grand Duke John, "Heir Presumptuous" to the Throne of Holland.

The Duke has endeared himself to the devotees of the ballroom pastime both here and at V. M. I. by his original interpretation of the dances—which interpretation is permeated with the graceful movements suggestive of those things which characterize his native land. As one would guess, the Duke has Vernon Castle backed off the boards; he is the social star of the season, no dance being a success without his ducal presence. No lady considers herself completely "rushed" unless she has trotted several heats with him, while our much eclipsed social satellites copy him from his head to his feet. The Duke is the much-sought-after bridge player we have heard so much about, during the winter season. He is idolized by the "Ancient and Honorable Alliance of Spinsters." In fact, he has been the greatest advertisement our dances have had—our fair visitors carrying away lasting impressions made by the agile feet of our own Grand Duke John.

The Duke will not be with us next year, as he will take up his duties as Ambassador to the Fiji Islands in the early spring. We don't know, but we can make a pretty safe bet that there will be a revival of the dance craze among the Aborigines just as soon as the Duke lands. We trust that the dance will not take place around a kettle occupied by a disgruntled diplomat fricassée à la Holland.

During the session 1916-17, the Calyx Staff has been greatly embarrassed by the thousands of suggestions and contributions poured in by the students.

BOB IGNICO

Above, ladies and gentlemen, we present for your consideration the weakest, most shallow-chested and altogether puny bit of physique that ever hit this school. It is said that when Doc Pollard first saw Bob come ambling up the campus, he realized that at last had come the time when Washington and Lee could no longer do without compulsory gym class. The result was that, inspired by the sight of little Bobby, Doc instituted what has ever since been the bane of the indolent Freshmen lives.

The way Diminutive Ignico happened to leave his Massachusetts home for the far Southland was this: Jiggs Donahue liked the kid and had used all his arguments to make a W. & L. man out of him but to no avail. Finally, the little Irishman mentioned—as Jiggs frequently does—the existence of a Beanery in Lexington. It was enough, for Bob wanted to know no more and a few days later Doc Pollard was inspired, as we have lied to you above.

Besides being some quarterback on the Varsity, at the Heavy gym contest of 1917, Bobby carried off the medal as Champion All-around Grunter. Great fear was caused among the spectators that his frail body might give way to the strain which that big Brute Burtner was imposing on our bean-fed boy. However, he pulled through and is now getting along nicely.

(Imagination and audacity are necessary traits in the modern humorous editor's makeup.)

TOADY KERN

Toady Kern! Who is so lacking in a sense of humor that he will not smile on hearing that name. Never was a school blessed with so jovial a pedagogue. Smiles, smiles and more smiles play on the soft lines of his bright face like little sunbeams softly caressing old Mother Earth on a bright balmy spring day. It is indeed a blessing to sit beneath this happy man, for he has the rare gift of making the classics of a dead language as full of life as a prancing colt. His jokes, which are many, are never "twice-told tales," and shrieks and howls of laughter are constantly emanating from the cheery little classroom on the second floor of the Main Building. That Toady has a keen sense of humor is clearly proved by the treat he gave Secretary of War Baker on Founder's Day, when he bounced that astonished personage up a half dozen Lexington blocks in a honest-to-goodness Detroit Ford. You will admit that no other person on this globe has a keen enough appreciation of the ridiculous to play such a trick on a Cabinet Secretary. Surely, while the kindly smile of this dear Latin teacher gleams forth upon packed benches, Latin can never become a dead letter at Washington and Lee University.

LINDSAY LEE MOORE

Of all the widely-traveled and world-wise men that have ever found themselves stranded in this little obscure burg, the above gentleman undoubtedly is the most Cosmopolitan. On the football trips, he amazed his team-mates by the easy nonchalance with which he beckoned to the numerous bell-hops who were kept busy paging him in every hotel he blessed with his presence. Mr. Moore is decidedly inclined to the blasé mannerisms of the man who has seen much of this little terrestrial globe. At times this trait is rather noticeable on the football field, where he has often been seen to pick up some little 180 pounder on an opposing team and carelessly toss him on the unfortunate referee's head, some twenty yards away.

You would gather from the above that Lindsay Lee is SOME MAN. Well, we can't deny it. It is told that last summer, when he had spent all his coin in high and riotous living, he entered a munitions factory and applied for a job. He was put to lifting 100-lb. schrapnel, and the boss soon found out that this young Atlas was doing about five thousand more foot-pounds of work to the hour than the biggest and hardest tough in the factory. Needless to say, Lindsay cleaned up money, and brought tears to the eyes of the boss when he handed in his resignation.

But, sovereign reader, we have not yet explained to you the above snapshot taken by the CALYX Photographer. Now, Lindsay Lee Moore, Esquire is a bear-cat with the fair sex. Besides holding their undivided attention on the dance floor, where he reigns supreme, he captivates 'em all by his cute way of talking and by his good looks. The latter are due to his Herculean physique and his indisputable comeliness of feature. The football team will never forget how he led an entranced chorus girl from Somewhere-on-Broadway a merry evening in New York, taking in the big city all the way from taxicabs with their "little clocks" to a spree at Rector's. To most men, it would have been some night's experience, but Mr. Moore wasn't a bit hilarious—when he paid the bills.

Honk! Honk! Honk! Honk!

There he goes! Who? Granny Campbell. Where's he goin'? To the football field, we reckon. That's where Granny is most of the time that there's anything doing on the field. Never has the White and Blue had a more loyal rooter than this popular Politics Expounder. Football, baseball, crew or whatnot, Granny is sure to be right there on the sidelines. Moreover, his loyalty is not the sort that contents itself with a big noise. Last fall, at the close of the hard gruelling season, he presented football blankets to every man on the Varsity, and more than once did he show his interest in many practical ways. His car has become almost as much a fixture on Wilson Field as the grandstand or backstop.

Granny's classes are famous. They are the untiring "crips" recommended to, and ridden by, every freshman. However, those that have entered them to learn have never gone away at all empty handed, and the loafers have generally gotten a grade not far from their just deserts. Furthermore, Granny is never lacking in sound opinions on national and international events. When some freshman comes forth with an elaborate discussion of such-and-such an issue before Congress, it is a pretty safe bet as to just where he got the information.

Athletics and Political Science, then, are Granny's two hobbies, just as rocks and golf are the two delights of "Ole Harry." Some have claimed that the subject of this sketch would rather be on the Athletic Field than in the classroom. But who wouldn't? Of Granny, we might adapt the description of the sentiments of a certain famous Roman:

Not that he loves Politics less,
But that he loves football more.

GENERAL CUTEY EASTER

Above you see the living embodiment of the Spirit of France. There's not a Frenchman in Paris or Alsace-Lorraine that more devoutly longs for a victorious France or who would be more pleased if the Kaiser were to get the gout or measles. Not only has Cutey mastered every idiom and idiosyncrasy of the French tongue, but not even President Poincaré himself could surpass our subject in gesticulating expressivement à la française. It would not be safe for Cutey now in the most obscure alley of Berlin, for his little goatee would doom him more certainly than any circumstantial evidence or even the testimony of Von Hindenburg himself.

We have never heard of Cutey getting caught telling the same joke twice: his wit is not that kind, but is the sort that springs forth before he himself knows it almost. Furthermore, history records no occasion on which a Cutey joke fell flat. Again, we say, Cutey jokes are not that kind.

Moreover, the learned Doctor can upon meeting a pretty callie magically forget every dry-as-dust book in the Library and become one of the best little Beau Brummels going inside of two-hundredths of a second. The line of gallantry that he turns out would make the most astute heartbreaker in the world blush with shame, but Cutey blushes not, and furthermore, he never fails to make the pretty young thing think she's met the modern Lord Chesterfield.

Finally, Cutey has won his way into the heart of every student on the campus. We're willing to put him up beside the best of profs any day in the week, but that would be a "physiological impossibility" for even Sissy Stevens cannot put one thing beside itself. Down with the Kaiser! Vive la France! But first, last and always Vive le Cutey!

Dance Though of Short Duration Greatly Enjoyed By All Present

The ninety-ninth Durbar ball took place last Sunday night in the Uncle Remus Gymnasium. From every viewpoint the affair was attractive and successful. The proceeds were unusually large, over $200.00 of bum checks being turned in to the grateful manageress of the affair. This, of course was the main consideration and object of the Bawl.

The dance opened by a figure led by Dr. Hoyt, as a Dutch Boy, with Miss Sorrells as Some Girl, promptly at midnight. As the President sauntered gracefully down the floor, Parker's saxophone moaned in great volume—just to let everybody know it had at last arrived. When the President and his partner mounted the throne, the young gentlemen performed an Old Dominion curtsy and the young ladies with characteristic Virginia modesty a graceful somersault. Miss U. May Seamore was much embarrassed just after the figure trying to find among the merry throng her costume, a beautiful string of beads, which had slipped off in the gymnastics. The young gentlemen, with true Southern courtesy, gathered around Miss Seamore to help in locating the beads, which were finally found. Miss Seamore was greatly relieved, for she is a typically modest young lady and naturally had clothed herself in the interval with a blush of shame.

Supper consisted of immense quantities of delicious cuisine products. So satiated were the dancers that after supper, few could do anything but waltz, and that poorly enough. At last, Duke Furnee was in his element.

The dance closed at one-thirty by the lights suddenly going out. It is intimated by some that the fault was not entirely with the University Electric Plant, since a certain University financier and crepe-hanger was seen a second or so before hanging around the switchboard. Why is it that bugs will hang around and meddle with the lights?

All the "Titaniacs" got away successfully—from the dance floor.

Most conspicuous among those present were:

Mr. Hogue Addison as Purity with Miss U. Seamore as Truth.

Mr. Siamese Mackey as Night with U. S. Littledress as Naughty.

Mr. I. R. Roastin as Arctic Explorer with Davie Falk as Jerusalem.

Prof. Dodd as A Tort with Miss Fair Harvard as Profound Wisdom.

Mr. More Lindsay as "Laddie" with Miss O. B. Gentle as "Puck."

Mr. Simmons Martin as Cigarette with Miss Brownie William as Four Roses.

Mr. Cox Bill as The Crab with Miss Tommie Ferrara as Kultur.

Mr. Ruff Railroad as The Czar of Rockbridge with Miss Heluva Police as

Mr. D. O. Hold as Chile Con Carne with Miss Heinz as Pork and Beans.

Doc Dollard as First Aid with Miss Fletcher Forrest as I. M. Speedy.

Mr. Lone Star Bryan as Quietude with Miss Smithson as Shrieks.

Mr. Dickey as Inertia with Miss Ordeman as Acid.

Dr. Kern as Mirth with Miss Gignillat as Youth.

Mr. Heinous Gillyam as Pawn Ball Izzy with Miss Basketball as Prey.

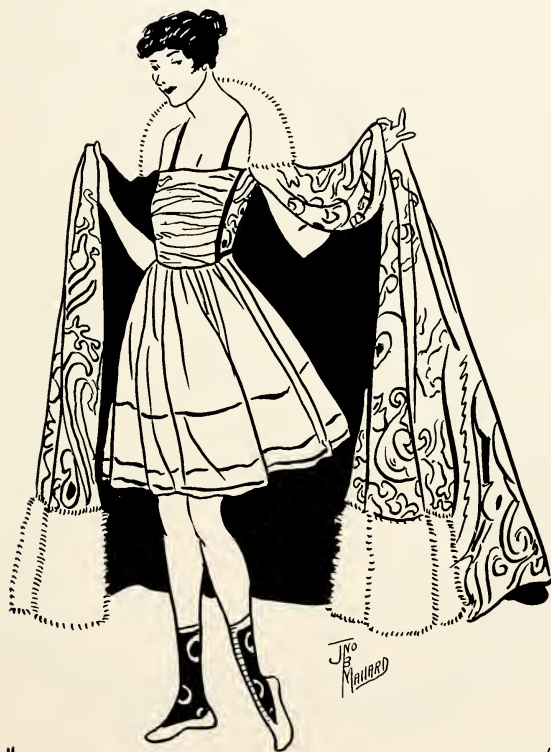

Mr. Booce Woodruff as Business with Miss W. N. L. Co-op as Profit.

Mr. Jones Homer as Loafer with Miss Bobbie Gardner as Grind.

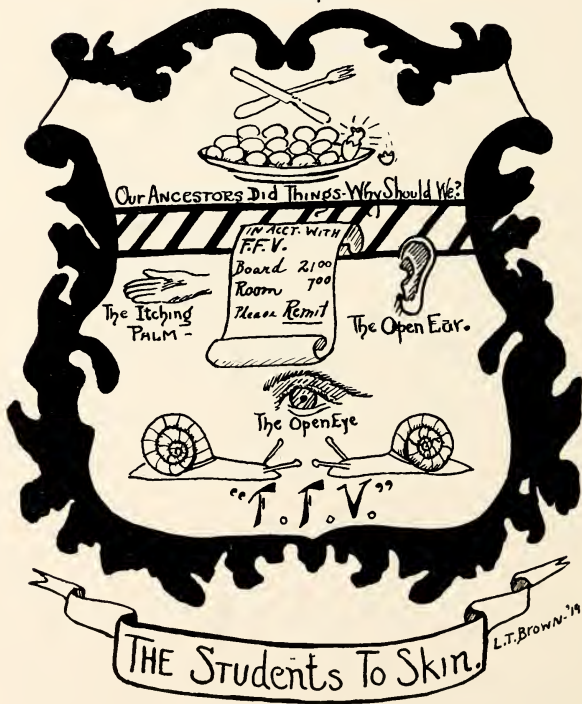

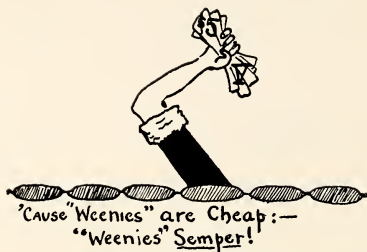

Mr. Eddie Campbell as Athlete with Miss B. F. Sutherland as Butterfly.

Mr. Pierotti All as Percival with Miss Banks as The Girl Who Smiles.

"ROME WAS NOT MADE IN A DAY"
—BUT—
OUR COSTUMES ARE MADE IN A MINUTE.

Lexington, in the Valley of Virginia

My boy, I've lived in Lexington
The Heart of the South, they say.
And here I'm ready my course to run,
Until my funeral day.

For I've basked in the warm sunlight
of Spring,
When the rhododendrons bloom,
When the birds of youth and love do
sing,
And the bookworm leaves his room.

In the night on the campus I've heard the tune
Of "Aloha" on mandolins low,
And shines up above a great big moon
And a billion stars or so.

Oh! Venice can have her watery street
And Hawaii her Waikiki;
But here's to the school where life is sweet,
Old Washington and Lee.

Where man knows man as only a man
Can know a good friend true,
Where men will do every bit they can
And more for the White and Blue.

And here's to the F. F. V.'s and all,
And here's to the green Laddie,
May his Scotch blood boil as he tramps
the soil
Of Washington and Lee.

and delicate, the color of old roses.
How like her! Blue forget-me-nots

She gave it to me at a dance. The orchestra within was playing a waltz.
The soft, scent-laden breeze blew a tendril of her hair in my face. Her hair, that June night during Finals.

The music sang of love, of youth, of hope.

"You will not forget?" she whis-

answered her with kisses.

I have not forgotten, dear. I wonder yet, what was your name?

HONEYBEE BOYD

Webster's Collegiate Dictionary defines the word honey-bee as "a bee of the genus Apis, which lives in communities and collects honey." Noah further goes on to define honey—as figuratively used—as "that which is sweet and pleasant, like honey." We hate to detract from the fame of the great lexicographer, but we can not help feeling that he must have been a bird in his youth and somewhat of a Beau Brummel around the ladies. Else, how could he have so aptly defined honey and the honey gatherer? Now, far be it from us to call Adie a honey-bee. If there's no truth in the intimation, this sketch should not bother its subject—or rather we should say, its victim. If, on the other hand, there is some truth in the accusation, then Adie deserves the most harsh condemnation. Such practices should always be frowned upon by the conscientious Twentieth Century college man. To the Freshmen, especially, do we want to give warning. When some lucious and altogether tantalizing calic smiles sweetly at you, frown upon her, and turning on your heel, walk rapidly away. Otherwise, some day some inconsiderate Humorous Editor may label you as belonging to the genus Apis, so that you will have to tear out that particular page of your perfectly nice Calyx before showing it to the home folks.

But oh, yes, we were talking about Mr. Boyd. Well, Adie's one of these good boys that we all like to have around. When not around the ladies, he possesses a large share of good common sense. Though never having carried the football of intellect on Dr. Smith's intellectual gridiron, he has always been on the right side of the middle average when the grades came in. As Manager of the Ring-tum Phi, he turned in the largest surplus to the Student Body coffers that up to date had ever been presented. So, like a true honey-bee, Adie is a good worker, and performs capably the tasks and duties that fall to him.

(The above sketch is a bit unfair to Adie, since he is but one of many just as notorious bees in the Washington and Lee hive.)

A LONG PROBLEM IN MATH

RUNT PAXTON

Now, my friends, this is an advertisement used by the manufacturers of a popular automobile in calling the public's attention to the graceful lines of the underslung type. You must admit that he has a sturdy body, the lines of which would make a sculptor's fingers itch. Galla has spent most of his time at Washington and Lee in a vain search for a man smaller than himself.

Galla has done other things here at W. and L. He has played on the football team and in many instances has demonstrated the superiority of the underslung type for endurance and power. If he is not able to step over his opponents, he never hesitates to go under or through them. But it is not only in football that this little bundle of "pep" uses such methods. In his performance of the heavy duties as Manager of this book, he has convinced many an advertising manager that as a medium of profitable advertising, the New York Times is backed off the map by The Calyx 1917.

Our hero is one of those men that make Washington and Lee the best of all schools, for after all how could we get along without smiles and lots of them, and Galla is a chronic smiler. Few men on our campus have the large number of strong friends that Galla has, and it is safe to say that none would be as much missed, should he decide not to return next year. Here's hoping that this 800 horse power Underslung will be still breezing up the University walks next fall, or better still be kicking up the dust into the eyes of our opponents on old Wilson Field when Bill Rafferty calls the gang together for fall practice.

Advice

If at love you are unlucky—

Oh, play poker:

For if what the bards

Have said is true,

A deck of cards

Holds luck for you—

Oh, play poker.

Plenty of chips old love wounds heal.

So, play poker:

But as soon as a stack

You can amass

And then get back

In the lover's class—

Don't play poker.

There's many a slip 'twixt cup and lip

In this vale through which we roam;
So it behooves a man to cash when he can,

For poker chips have no home.

Wine and women and one-card draws

Can most any man lick:

In them all he soon will find

There's an unexpected kick.

RUSHING ETHICS OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY

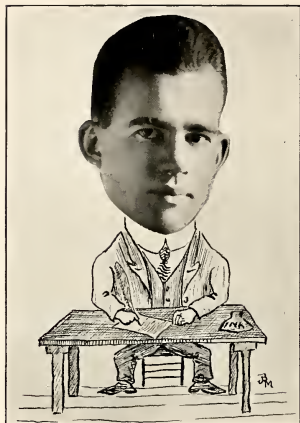

The Big Ben resounded through the sacred, secret, mystic halls of the I Tappa Keg House, the Eminent High Mogul wrestled with Morpheus, came out victorious, disentangled himself from the sheets and ran for that early morning C. & O. You can all guess what was the cause of his industry when I tell you that it was early fall and college had just opened.

The Virginia Creeper backed into the station with its customary languor, and Mogul reached the station in time to see the cause of all his discomfort step off the train accompanied by several members of the Goo Goos, the hated rivals of his "fritney." The representatives of the Goo Goos spirited their victim away in Rice's Saxon and then kept him under lock and key until he would promise to join the fritney of fritneys. The victim began to grow tired of solitary confinement and gave his word that he would join; so the Goo Goos turned him loose, without his pledge button, for no other purpose than to bump the I Tappa Kegs; the victim having secured his freedom went joyously out on his rather vile mission. At the pool room he met A. Rum Hound, a member of D. T. K., and Rum suggested a game of pool. It occurred to Rum that he would get in soft by letting his victim win a few dollars from him at Kelly pool; this having been done he suggested a drink of Scotch—now victim began to sit up and take notice—he began to see that Rum Hound was a man among men. The pair arrived at the D. T. K. house, and the whole crew was there with stiff collars, fresh shines and creased trousers—and breaths of Four Roses. They ushered victim into the living room, and there—everywhere—were bottles of the most tempting alcoholic concoctions. He soon caught the spirit of the party, proved himself a worthy candidate for the honored insignia of the alcoholic aristocracy and by the time he was due at the Goo Goos House he was thoroughly saturated with the spirit of Bacchus, the patron saint of D. T. K. The members realizing that the opportune moment was at hand, pledged the victim and he started home, reeling like a fishing schooner in a storm.

Victim heaved to, took a reef in his mainsail and navigated the stairway and ran foul on his rum-mate's bed. Then victim began to say "I done it"; then rum-mate began to take notice and asked victim what he had done. "Joined one of them fritneys," victim answered. "What fraternity have you joined," asked rum-mate. "I don't know its name but its on my co-ee-coat." Rum-mate saw the accursed button of the D. T. K.'s—the jig was up—their hated rivals had scored. They then decided that he was not the kind of a fellow they wanted anyhow, he was too crude, and besides he was not an athlete.

HOW LONG WILL HE LAST ?

"EDITORIAL BILLIE"

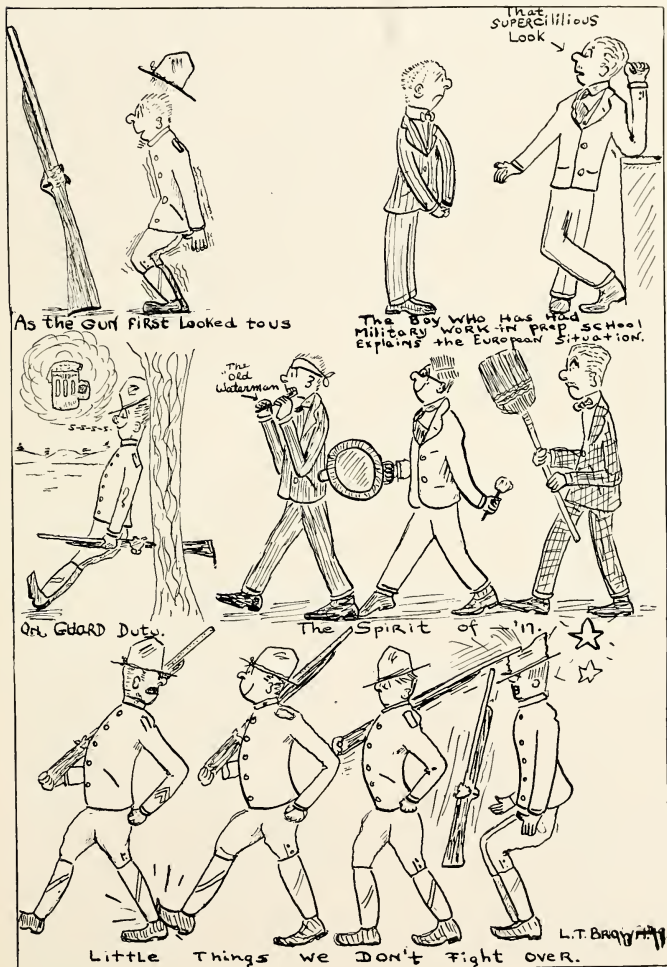

Allow us, ladies and gentlemen, to usher you into the austere presence of the one Editor in all the world. He is a Bird, a Reformer, and a Patriot. In the first named capacity, he wrote up the shame of the Ribbon Society Shows and gave the very significant comment, "The shows were greatly enjoyed by all." This proves he is a Bird. Dr. Smith said so. As a Reformer, besides getting a new globe installed in the main building, Willie had the nerve to go to the extent of daring to intimate that the only infallible potentate on this terrestrial ball—the august Executive Committee of the Washington and Lee Student Body—had made an error!!!! Anyone having the nerve to do this has Martin Luther, James Cannon and Billy Sunday backed off the map. Finally, William is a Patriot. While Billie's sensitive quill shall scratch, the freedom of the press shall never—no, never!—be impaired.

All joking aside—for joking has no place in Campus Scandal!—the Ring-tum Phi that Billy has put out this year has been a thoroughly creditable and representative paper, and we of a sister publication heartily congratulate him on his year's work. May we be given as good an Editor next year.

This is Gilliam's favorite pose. We noticed this as soon as he grabbed the purse strings of the Basket Ball team. The Athletic Association gave Heine fifteen cents to run the season on and he brought back sixteen cents change. You would think from this that he had stinted his team in the allowance of athletic necessities, but such is not the case—he made them think they were getting more than they ever had before. The whole bunch was satisfied with Gilliam's work, and the Athletic Association was more than pleased, because Heine had actually made some money out of Basket Ball, a thing that the Association had not expected. Heine did well with this generally losing sport and we wish to congratulate him on his success.

This is not, however, our hero's only claim to fame, for he has excelled here in many ways: He has been President of the Y. M. C. A. and has administered wisely and judiciously over that complex organization and brought the work to a successful close. Mutatis mutandis, as a politician he is right at home, and when he puts open the throttle on the old steam roller he makes Charlie Murphy look like an amateur. One of Heine's favorite greetings is, "Now, I'm not politicking, but So-and-So, etc., etc."

CY YOUNG

It's a good thing that Cy isn't a member of the gentler sex, for his reputation socially would be at about minus 100 per cent. Never has a more speedy young thing hit this old campus than this West Virginia space eater. His means of locomotion, we are glad to say, are not of that Olympic variety that must be petted and pampered and never risked in any

BALDY BANE

Speaking of Sharks, let us deal with this young Maryland product. Although some of the men in the Academic School have at times wondered if the long sob stories of toil presented to them by the embryonic lawyers were altogether veracious, yet you'll have to admit that a man must be pretty good to hold a consistent record of ninety-five in any ticket—not excepting even Geology I or Doc Pollard's Co-operative Hygiene. Yet Baldy has not been satisfied with even ninety-five, but has approached so close to the Impossible Hundred that that self-satisfied figure has more than one trembled with horror and dismay. Even Joe Long is careful of what he says when Bane is in the class, for well he knows that no slip would escape unnoticed.

Baldy is the sort of man in whom one instinctively feels confidence, and who walks straight into the hearts of all who know him. He is a man's man to the core. Far be it from Baldy to trip "on the light fantastic toe" with any calic, no matter how inspiring she may be to others. Baldy Bane can't be bothered with the ladies; if he were, it's no telling how many hundredths of a point his legal status might fall.

As to the future, we are willing to bank the standing of our architecturally beautiful Tucker Hall and all the combined wealth of legal lore contained within its real hard bumps. Although Cy is fully able to hold his own on the Intercollegiate Track, he is just as good in half a dozen other sports, and no man in the University has scored half as many points towards her victories. More serious a problem than even the One Year Rule will be our loss of this young speed king next year, and in the years to come W. & L. fathers will gather their wee tots about them and tell them of Cy's famous grid-iron runs, or of his unerring accuracy on the Doremus basketball floor.

Cy, however, in spite of his athletic prowess is by no means an athlete of the cave man variety. You will acknowledge that Washington and Lee is very, very particular in its choice of Final Ball Presidents. Cy has held down the Finals 1917 in an excellent manner, and if the Kaiser doesn't object, doubtless will present for our consideration one of the prettiest Final Ball Figures in the school's history. We have a hunch that he'll do it in spite of the whole German Autocracy.

In closing, we can only say that even so splendid a judge of men as Jogger Elcock has picked Cy out for a winner and has offered him a position in the Southern branch of the Portland Cement Company. If a good college record means anything, Jogger will never regret the offer.

gray walls on the career of this, its shining light. We have no use for book-worms, but when a man can show a 97 record and at the same time keep as fully alive to the modern spirit of this campus as Baldy has, we say he'll win or there's no use to come to Washington and Lee.

"TEX" BRYAN

Here is a son of "The West That Was," engaged in his after-dinner exercise. Yes, this is a picture of an actual event that happened soon after Tex entered school. A Rockbridge farmer let this Bull get loose in the city streets and the said animal ran at large until Mayor Jackson called Tex into service—the Lexington Police Force being absent as usual—and asked him to "Sling the Bull!" "Tex" caught the infuriated brute and conquered him. Managers of different football teams heard of this feat and immediately sought to have Bryan removed from the Washington and Lee team, as their guards objected to playing against him because they feared that "Tex" might try some of his "Bulldozing" tricks on them. We know one thing about "Tex's" opponents and that is they always looked as though they had been in a stampede when he had finished with them.

We shall all miss the blond guard from Texas. The opposing teams will be glad to know that his college days are no more. The residents of Letcher Avenue will miss his early morning, confidential remarks when this pro-type of "Kit Carson" returns to his native mesquite and cactus.

FINALS 1917—Alumni Upon Returning From Distant Points Find Virginia Gone Dry

The Duke Furnee—may Providence bless him—formerly the Grand Nccount of the Lower Netherlands and now Minister Plenipotentiary to Miss Annie's India Durbar Court, is a scream with the ladies. At the V. M. I. dances, during one of the moonlight extras, the Duke was cooing sweet nothings to a regular girl. Appreciating a good joke when she saw it, suddenly the calic gurgled out, "Oh, Mr. Furnee, you tickle me to death!" Now, the Duke didn't know but he had a hunch that that was no way to treat a lady, and loosening his hold, replied, "I beg your pardon, Mademoiselle, it won't occur again."

(Note: The Duke says that American slang is too much for him. We agree unanimously.)

WE CAN'T BE BOTHERED

There was a big bit of bad to every "good old day,"

That we hear so much about,

There were faults and freaks to the "good old way"

That were nothing to brag about,

The men were good but something was wrong,

And the life they led was not the heluva song,

That some would try to point out.

So don't come to us with the sobs for the past,

We can't be bothered with the fuss,

And the new that has come has come to last,

So tell not your sobs to us.

JIGGS DONAHUE

The 18 carat humored son of the Emerald Isle who peeps forth from the top of

A painting that won first prize in the Exposition des Beaux Arts, Paris—entitled:

"The Spirit of 1917"

or

"Dodo Comes to the Aid of a Distressed America."

this page has, during the seven years of his sojourn on the Campus of W. & L., proved himself one of the most loyal and interested members of the student body. The only thing on the debit side against Jiggs is that it has been persistently rumored that he was in some way connected with the ornamentation of Laddie on St. Patrick's day. This rumor is substantiated by the strongest kind of circumstantial evidence, to-wit: Jiggs is an Irishman, after the painting Laddie was first discovered in the neighborhood of the Beanery, Donahue's domicile, and a can of green paint was found in the rear of this establishment immediately after the decoration. Now it is not the intention of the writer to impute the execution of this bit of art to Mr. Donahue, the facts are simply laid before the public for its information.

Donahue coached the most successful basket ball team that ever represented this institution, receiving not a single defeat during the entire season. Just at the time his baseball team hit their stride the war interfered and he and his ball tossers stepped out of the soft gray uniform and donned the khaki. No man who will leave here this year will be missed more than the genial Jiggs, and he takes with him a multitude of good wishes.

"If"

If I were the President
And the President were me,
My two-fold self would for us
What otherwise will not be.

For I would be the President
And a W. & L. man to boot
And I would make a general
Of every W. & L. recruit.

The W. & L. P. T. B.
With the fight that we all know
Would be with me in the field
To make the Germans blow.

We'd drive them back to Prussia,
Drive them back every man,
And we'd rush them with the pleasure
That they used to rush the can.

We'd give them a taste of what they've fed,
We'd over Germans domineer;
And in their own land of Verboten
We'd make Verboten beer.

Then once more the President,
And no longer chief of staff,
I'd again take to writing notes
On the Kaiser's epitaph.

—I. S.

THE DOG NUISANCE

Common Curs and Aristocratic Canines have completely overrun the campus. All the students of the University regret that our beautiful campus must be the frolicking ground of dogs and scruffy mangy curs as well. The U. B. Club has tried to eradicate this evil by appealing to the owners, but all to no avail. The ladies maintain that their "darling, precious tweekums" have as much right on the campus as those who pay eight hundred or a thousand dollars per year for the privilege of staying in the metropolis of Rockbridge.

Women are a bit inconsistent after all!!

One cannot step on the campus without running the risk of having a shaggy, dirty, flea-bitten colic dog run madly at his heels and at the same time let loose a series of canine yelps. Many an upright stude has lost control of his otherwise proper vocabulary simply because the owners of these pests will not send them out with a maid.

Ladies!! Ladies!! please, for the love of Mike, keep these wheezen-nosed, flea bitten, germ-carrying "darlings" at home in the privacy of your own boudoir, there you alone will suffer and the poor students who are forced to remain here will not have to pay the debt incurred by you.

BOB MACDOUGLE

In another part of this humorous section, you will find a reference to the likeness that this young man bears to a certain famous character in Greek Mythology. Like many other things in Campus Scandal, that reference is no joke. Bob has indeed carried the world on his shoulders at Washington and Lee. He is one of the men that you seldom see loafing at McCrum's or the pool room. Most valuable have been his services as football manager, in which capacity he gave us a schedule that has added much to the reputation of Washington and Lee athletics. Although it is a notorious fact that most collegiate athletic managers find plenty of chances to coin money by wagering on a winning team, yet Bob never bet but once and then returned the shekles to the loser. Can you beat it?

But enough of the managerial dope! Bob could do without it entirely and still have plenty of claim to fame. The dances that he has led while in the University are many and successful, reaching their climax in the Fancy Dress Ball of the present year, which with the Durbar Court as its central idea received representation in many of the leading papers of the East.

THE FACULTY MEETING ORATIONS

For years, professors have lectured on the same subjects, in the same dry way, telling the same pointless jokes to the helpless students of this and other universities. The poor victim has never had any protection, but has had to endure it all and summon up a sickly humble smile at the close. Recently, quite a reform has been inaugurated by our President. The professors are now required to afflict each other with five minute talks. One will talk on "Freshman Supervision," another on "How to Conduct a Recitation." A third will follow with a choice of subjects, ranging from "The Financial Standing of Christopher Columbus" to "The Angelic Disposition of Railroad Ruff." Of course, the latter subject can hardly be discussed in polite society. Generally, at this point in the faculty meeting, Professor Long and Dr. Kern begin to arguing their respective merits in the gentle game of golf. Dr. Easter, being a live person and hoping to put a wee bit of life into the august body, tells of certain physiological impossibilities much to the horror of Brother Hoguee. After Mr. Dodd has contributed a story or so of fair Harvard, and "Liv" Smith tells how to grow fat, the old mossbacks can stand it no longer and the meeting breaks up ignominiously.

"Ain't love grand?"

That after dance date you have for Monday night of Finals 1917

A Few Sparks from the Campus Annal

One of the most remarkable characteristics of a Washington and Lee dance is the whole-hearted manner in which the would-be social stars flock to the rescue of the young lady who has been so unfortunate as to neglect the education of her pedal extremities in that greatest of womanly allurements—terpischorean dexterity.

The Pan-Hellenic council is nothing more than a Mexican Arena with Tommy Farrar as the chief Toreador.

The chief question now before the ribbon societies is, "What inducement can we offer the Sophs, since Virginia is bone dry?"

'dralloP coD sselb doG

The only thing Dip Estes ever received a compliment on his dancing accomplishments was the time he broke the Duke.

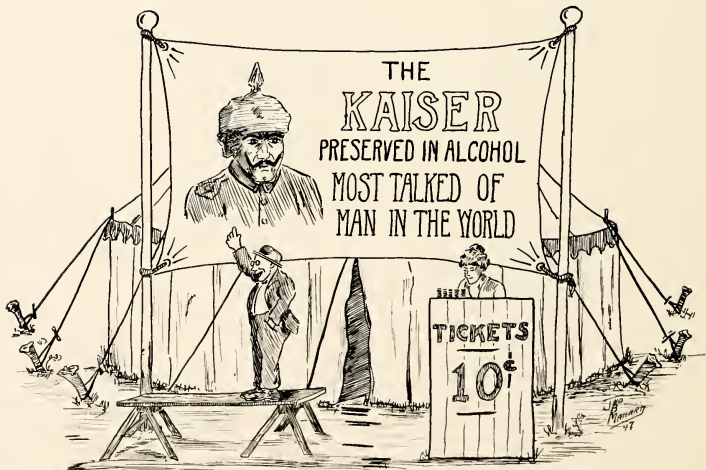

Shrimp Jones: "Good morning, Duke. What the devil was that dance you were doing last night?"

Furnee: "O, that danz—was ze Lame Luke, Schimp."

Dr. Harry resisting the temptation not to work is as funny as seeing Heine Gilliam scramble five dollar bills in an East Lexington holiday crowd.

Father Time's Private Secretary

A SUGGESTION FOR RAISING FUNDS TO PAY OFF THE WAR DEPT

W. W. Preston, The Movie Magnate

You frequently hear some misguided youth, who has caught a wee small bit of the spirit of Wanderlust, express a desire to see something of the world. He may go even so far as to try to sell books or aluminum ware in the summer time, or take a trip to the top of House Mountain. But he soon finds that this bucking up against the world is a very prosaic or disheartening business and wishes he were back under Dad's paternal roof. In W. W. Preston, however, Washington and Lee has a man who has stood the hardest blows that a varied experience could hand him, and who has in the end come out with a nature as square as they make 'em. He has traveled from the South Sea Isles to the wildest mountains in West Virginia. He has run pool rooms, bowling alleys, roller skating rinks, movie shows and what not—always fighting on through every conceivable discouragement to success.

A year or so back, he felt a desire for a little peaceful rest and dropped into Lexington. Since here, he has won his way into the hearts of many of his fellow students. He quickly entered into the spirit of this great old school, and expressed his loyalty, not by a series of coyote college rah rah yells, but by a far more practical method. He owns the leading and only—since the manager of the Dixie decided to take up his bed and walk elsewhere—theatre of the town. This he has time and again generously given over free of charge to the Athletic Association for the receiving of special wires from the games, with no other reward than the sincere gratitude of his college mates. Such a service we can not but be glad to recognize, and our only regret is that the Constitution does not provide for the awarding of a monogram to those who do so much, if not more, for our athletics as the stars on the field themselves. Such a man is W. W. Preston. We only hope that he will continue in the managership of the Lyric, for while he does that popular resort will never share the fate of the ill-famed Dixie.

If there's anything to advertisement we ought to be able to help the war fund by selling the 1920 Cream of the South. For further reference see the grandstand roof and every other little old walk of the University.

Since war has been declared, hard students have been as difficult to find in W. & L. as smiles on the face of the head of the Latin department.

After the "Push Ball" Rush.

MAKING A MAN OUT OF HIM

The Senate Fillibusters: Stone, La Follette, Vardaman and other German sympathizers would substitute the Goose for the American Eagle.

Generally, an action will not lie unless the witnesses will.

That Sherman knew how to describe war will not be denied by the rich young stude who joined the W. & L. Battalion in order to make a hit with the fair sex.

Tommy Farrar's patriotic hatred for the Kaiser is to those who used to argue with him in behalf of the Allies as funny as Pat Collins trying to explain why he flunked History.

Some of the Fancy Dress Ball Costumes were, like a good story, calculated to "hold youth from play and old men from the chimney corner."

PIEROTTI AND ROGERS MIX IT UP TO THE GLORY OF WASHINGTON AND LEE

New Man (just having met Bob McDougle): "Mr. McDougle reminds me of some famous character in Greek mythology. I can't recall—"

Old Man: "Atlas? He too had the world on his shoulders."

Chemistry Student: "I can't make any sense out of this formula."

Another: "Yes, it's just about as clear as an annual athletic report."

Treasurer Paul M. Penny has recently expended a large sum for asbestos curtains, to be used in the chapel. This was found necessary after Dr. Smith's heated presentation of the Ribbon Society Show problem.

Allein Beall: "Say, Joe, a freshman told me that you all have a joke on me in the Calyx."

Joe B.: "Only your picture, Allein."

"NUFF SAID!!"

THE SOCIETY FOR SUPPRESSION OF DANCING WITH GIRLS.

It is no secret, my boy, and I am violating no confidence when I tell you that there is a man—using the word in a reckless manner—who opposes dancing to the fullest extent of his powers at Washington and Lee. This man is a power with the Board of Trustees and when he lets his jaw clamp down on some choice morsel of college scandal, he will not rest till he has aired it before the Board. Thus, when he hears that some young lady has appeared at the Fancy Dress Ball in a costume a la mode, he immediately gets busy and tries to find therein some good opening for a flank attack upon dancing. Again, if he has heard that some social lion has cut a class the morning after the Junior Prom, he rushes to the Fathers to the time of the "Marseillaise," and shrieks out in revivalist tones of agony, "Do away with dancing, and we shall need no Automatic Rule." The Board knows that the students are not quite ready for the abolition of the sweetest of all their best pleasures in this wilderness of stunted family trees, for it remembered that last year a hand that reached out to feel the pulse of the student body in that particular reform, and it remembered that that hand gripped a cactus. When the gentleman saw the Board was not willing to precipitate a riot, or that it perhaps had still a wee bit of the blood of youth in its veins, he quietly and ingeniously contrived a way to accomplish his purpose without embarrassing either the President or the Board of Trustees. He will eventually succeed unless the students get on to his mode of procedure. This, my boy, is the way in which he hopes to realize his dream of infantilism: He has, even at this time, selected another member of the Faculty as his co-worker in the Society S. D. G., whose duties are to attend diplomatically all the dances and keep his peepers and smellers open for anything that looks like terpsichorean scandal. Then, at twelve o'clock he is to give old man Wright the wink and at two minutes thereafter the lights mysteriously go out, and the whole party is thrown into gloom. At the next set of dances, this same diplomatic killjoy turns up his watch half an hour, and repeats the above performance. This way, you see, the old students will not notice the gentle but certain twisting of the knot, and the new men will not know that once upon a time Washington and Lee dancers were famous social affairs, enjoyed and appreciated by ladies and gentlemen. Yea verily, my boy, 'twill not be long before, owing to the narrow-mindedness of these gleaming reformers, on our way to a dance we shall meet ourselves coming home. Our dances!! How long will they last?

Greatness

It's great to be an editor,
To sit up late at night,
To scratch your wool,
And shoot the bull,
And write, and write, and write!

It's great to be a lawyer,
Like old Blackstone or Kent,
To spend a life
In toil and strife,
And die without a cent.

It's great to be a chemist,
HO plus HCl,
To work your years
In sweat and tears,
And then get blown to hell!

It's great to be a pool-shark,
To live in Higgin's Hall,
To drink good dopes,
And blast Freshies' hopes
With a well-aimed ivory ball!

Dancing Team Makes a Hit

YOUNG LADIES OF SWEET BRIAR GREATLY PLEASED BY THE TERPISCHOREAN REPRESENTATIVES OF WASHINGTON AND LEE.

The crowning feature of the dance was a contest staged between the dancing teams of Washington and Lee and the University of Virginia. The representatives from W. & L. were Honey Bee Boyd, Patrick Collins, Scrump Jones and Bud McKenzie. The reporter was unable to get the names of the Virginia dancers because the manager of that team had never met them.

The contest was staged in the Sweetbriar gym. It followed the Opening Figure. Captain Boyd lined up his well trained and seasoned veterans in the east end of the hall. The whistle blew and the orchestra cut loose on a wild fox trot. W. & L. easily took the lead and held it for three straight dances until Bud McKenzie fainted and had to be revived by several of his antagonists. In the fourth dance Scrump cast a shoe and went lame. This accident left only Honey Bee and Patrick to hold up the colors of the white and blue.

Seeming defeat was turned into victory in the last few seconds of the contest by a member of "THE" University getting his feet tangled in some of the young lady's wearing apparel and by his awkwardness caused his partner and himself to fall into a huge bowl of goldfish. Thus the game went to Washington and Lee by one fall-down.

One of the great catastrophes of the year was the collapse of the balconies in the chapel under the weight of the huge throng assembled to hear the Intercollegiate Debate.

"And we'll roll the Kaiser on the sod,
Rah, Rah, Rah!"

For a while we looked upon the Duke with suspicion because his fox trots resembled to a marked degree the German Goose Step.

LIBERAL ARTS APPLIED SCIENCE
COMMERCIAL LAW

Original endowment, a gift of $50,000, from George Washington. Presided over from '65 to '70 by Robert E. Lee. Situated amid the mountains of the unrivaled Valley of Virginia, in the town of Lexington, the home and burial place of both Lee and Jackson. Midway between the North and South. A national institution in its service and area of patronage, drawing its students from 35 states and foreign countries, yet distinctively Southern in its historic location and inspiring memories, in its social culture, cordiality to new students, "Honor-System," and heroic traditions.

University Dormitories, Commons Hall, Village Homes, Fraternity Halls.
